Why the Carmel City Council wants Hatton Canyon Freeway constructed

By ROBERT MISKIMON

CAN CARMEL have the Hatton Canyon Freeway and growth limits, too?

The answer, at least for the Carmel City Council, appears to be a wishful "yes."

Council members voiced support for the proposed $17 million roadway through Hatton Canyon in interviews with the Pine Cone/Outlook after a special meeting on the long-controversial project with state and county officials Aug. 11.

Their support seemed to hinge on three assumptions:

- That a divided, four-lane roadway through Hatton Canyon could be built in an "environmentally sensitive" fashion which would be less damaging to the canyon than a regular freeway.

- That the Hatton Canyon "parkway" would provide immediate relief to the traffic congestion between Carmel Hill and the mouth of Carmel Valley, but that limited water supplies and restraints in the Carmel Valley Master Plan would limit future growth — and traffic — which impact the city of Carmel.

- That widening of Highway 1 to six or seven lanes would provide only a temporary solution to the traffic congestion problem.

Council members voted 5-0 Aug. 17 to support construction of the Hatton Canyon roadway and a passing lane on Highway 1 between Ocean Avenue and Carmel Valley Road. The council voted unanimously last Wednesday to support Monterey County's request for a local hearing at the earliest possible date on a state transportation commission proposal to rescind the project and sell the right-of-way.

In an earlier resolution, the Carmel City Council went on record as opposed to rescission of the right-of-way, but individual council members were straightforward in their support for the roadway project.

"A freeway, no. A scenic roadway, yes," said Councilwoman Helen Arnold. "I support a minimal roadway through Hatton Canyon. I'm not in favor of widening Highway 1 at all."

A "scenic roadway" means a road "of no more than four lanes, two lanes each way separated," Mrs. Arnold told the Pine Cone/Outlook. "If we had the road one-way north through the canyon and one-way south on Highway 1, that would be the least destructive."

But Webb Beckstead, deputy director of the regional office of the state Department of Transportation in San Luis Obispo, said at the Aug. 11 meeting that the one-way concept had been studied years ago but ruled out as not cost-effective.

Councilman Frank Lloyd told this newspaper that construction of the roadway

Why the state doesn't think it can be financed

By ROBERT MISKIMON

REGARDLESS of how much the community may want the Hatton Canyon Freeway, the project still occupies a very low status with the state Department of Transportation.

And there is fierce competition for scarce funds to construct similar, badly-needed roadways throughout California, according to Jesus Garcia, Cal-Trans district director in San Luis Obispo.

The fact that the project has been proposed for rescission — with sale of the right-of-way — is an indication of the priority of the Hatton Canyon Freeway in relationship to other state road projects, Garcia indicated.

Of the total $910 million Cal-Trans state budget, $460 million — or 51 percent — is committed to aiding the federal dollars which provide 92 percent of the funds for interstate road projects, such as Route 5 which runs the length of California, Garcia said.

Twenty-seven percent of the Cal-Trans budget — or $245 million — is allocated for California road projects which are completely financed by only state dollars, Garcia said. And 22 percent of the Cal-Trans budget — or $200 million — is set aside for projects where the federal contribution is 80 percent.

The Hatton Canyon Freeway is in the latter category, known as "federal aid primary" roadways, Garcia said.

"Any funds for the Hatton Canyon Freeway would have to come out of that 22 percent portion of the total state budget,"

Garcia said. "That means that the $220 million for projects of this type, spread over the five-year budget period, would be about $40 million a year we have to spend statewide."

"Since the Hatton Canyon Freeway would be paid for 80 percent with federal dollars and 20 percent with state funds, that would be about $3.5 million in state funds," Garcia told the Pine Cone/Outlook. "That would be 10 percent of our total allocation for the state for any one year."

Competition for funds for that type of road project is intense, at the same time that the amount of funds has decreased in recent years, Garcia pointed out. "The dollars for

RIGHT-OF-WAY through Hatton Canyon which stretches for almost three miles has been proposed for rescission and sale by the California Department of Transportation, but local support for — and opposition to — the project has swelled in recent months. The State Transportation Commission is to hold a public hearing sometime this fall before it decides whether to go through with the rescission. Cal-Trans officials have estimated the $17 million project could not be funded for 15 to 20 years. (R.M.)

Regrets any 'shadow'

Dear Editor:

Last week you were kind enough to print a copy of a letter I had sent to the district attorney's office concerning the Carmel Woods annexation.

Because I did indicate considerable surprise at the active role Carmel Woods resident William Burleigh is taking in the pro-annexation force, it appears to many that he was the sole object of my ire. Some interpreted my letter as a request for an investigation of him.

This is not the case, as a careful reading of the letter will indicate. I was expressing my shock at the conduct of the entire pro-annexation force and I was including the majority of the Carmel City Council in that statement.

A municipality is forbidden by law from taking an active role in any annexation process until it is properly brought before that municipality's governing body. I feel Carmel agitated in favor of annexation long before this point was reached. I feel the best example of why one would not wish to be governed by the Carmel City Council in the future is to observe how a majority of its members now disregard the legal advice of its own city attorney.

I regret any shadow I may have cast upon the integrity of the honorable gentleman who sits on the bench of the Monterey Municipal Court.

Thanks for support

Dear Editor:

Once again the members of the Scottish Society, and the members of the Highland Games Committee in particular, would like to say thank you to your publications for their support and publicizing of the Highland Games charity event.

Your staff is always efficient and courteous, and they give us good coverage of both the Parade of the Caber in Carmel and the Games in Monterey. This year was no exception — and your layouts were particularly inventive.

Please know how much we appreciate your continued backing for this community affair which benefits the Elks National Cerebral Palsy Fund — and also provides some diversion along ethnic lines for Peninsulans and for the many participants and their families from all over California and the West.

Our thank you to each and every one of you involved.

'Disdain for taxpayers'

Dear Editor:

When it comes to disdain for the taxpayer, no voting record reveals it more than that of Sam Farr. Farr holds a record for "yes" votes that is unmatched by anyone in the legislature. Only Willie Brown comes close.

Farr is quoted as having said that the state "out-Reaganed Reagan" in passing its fragily balanced, sure-to-be-busted budget. Meanwhile, his spending has out-Brownded Brown — in fact, out-Brownded both Browns.

Here is part of the record of the perfect yes-man legislator. Let's hope the voters will hold him responsible for it in November. AB 902, yes; AB 1143, yes; AB 399, yes; AB 757, yes. AB 129, AB 1693, AB 629, AB 1172, AB 256, SB 153, all yes. Farr is COSTING you! SB 325, SB 459, SB 575, SB 686, AB 11, AB 130, AB 934, AB 1678, SB 40, SB 203, SB 215, AB 61, AB 65, AB 130, more yes votes. AB 650, AB 746, AB 780, AB 1282, AB 1317. That's not all the yes votes, but it's enough to get the idea. Do you realize what this kind of voting record costs the taxpayers of the 28th District?

A COST-efficient analysis of Farr's voting record is in order. (Pun intended.) It's time to turn Farr out. The taxpayers got burned with those Southern California special interest pot holders Farr sent out before the 1980 elections. Free, yes, but very expensive. Two years of Farr's fiscal irresponsibility is all we poor taxpayers can afford. Tell friends in Santa Cruz and elsewhere — elect James Peter Cost to serve in the Assembly in November.

Maintain tennis courts

Dear Editor:

It is one year since I wrote concerning the run-down condition of the high school tennis courts.

Today the surface of the courts are in great shape.

I'd like to thank those who arranged for that repair to be done.

However, may I suggest that unless the courts are swept and maintained regularly the surface will wear out more quickly than it should.

Perhaps the paths that lead to the courts could be paved to prevent the abrasive sands from being tracked in.

Second, the fencing still needs attention to complete the renovation.

Third, by taking care of the good things that we have, we give an example of public trust that is gravely needed.

Nuclear-free zones

Dear Editor:

Nuclear distress is spreading like the plague as nuclear arsenals keep on expanding. Upset citizens have good cause for alarm when over 100 military installations in the U.S. alone have nuclear stockpiles. These nuclear sites, many surrounded by large populations, are prime targets for destruction in the event of nuclear war.

Over the years, the Pentagon has steadily refused to confirm or deny the presence of nuclear warheads on military posts for so-called "security" reasons. As a consequence, we're increasingly faced by insanely cozy mixes of hapless civilians and nukes. Is Fort Ord one of these zoning nightmares, where nuclear explosives are stored in the middle of an urban complex? Local residents aren't told even though the Russians know.

If peace-loving citizens are ever to live in a civilized world again, a world where people don't have to face every second the dreadful threat of extinction, the turnaround must spring from the growing anti-nuclear movement.

A nuclear-free world can only come about when informed voters force reluctant decision-makers to stand up and demand nuclear-free zones for their endangered communities.

Festival says 'thanks'

Dear Editor:

It seems impossible that the 1982 Carmel Bach Festival is over. However, we can treasure the memory of a great season — a season filled with outstanding soloists, a fine orchestra, chorale and chorus. At this time of the year we are very much aware that the Festival could not exist without the help and support of so many in our community.

Thank you, and please express our thanks to all concerned, for the wonderful coverage given this year by the Pine Cone/Outlook. We are most appreciative of your continuing interest in the Festival.

It's time for officials to create recreation program

By ROBERT MISKIMON

IT'S REALLY too bad that elected officials of Carmel have not sensed any urgency to create — and fund — a city recreation program for citizens of all ages.

The proposal has been kicked around for years (as reported in last week's edition) and likewise shelved for years. Many people in the community — particularly those who work directly with youth and seniors — have expressed a desire for such a comprehensive program.

But somehow, the pleas have fallen on deaf ears. When it comes to buying property, such as the $400,000 Piccadilly Park lot in downtown Carmel, or providing funds to hire additional police officers, as the council did in the 1982-83 budget, Carmel officials can move with great alacrity.

It's probably become tiresome to hear about, but it remains true: social needs of citizens who live in this wealthy little community too often go begging. It's almost as if, by creating and funding a social program of any kind, public officials feel they would be giving legitimacy to the notion that all is not sweetness and light in Carmel.

It just isn't so. There are pockets of poverty in Carmel. There are senior citizens and young people who could benefit from a well-rounded recreation program, from affordable housing, from better public transportation. Much of this need is hidden behind pride — the pride of those in need as well as the misplaced pride of officialdom which refuses to deal with the problem.

The most telling aspect of this situation may well be that as many as 20 to 30 percent of the participants in the city of Monterey recreation programs — according to estimated by Monterey city staff — come from Carmel. No doubt there are those who come from other cities to use facilities and programs at Sunset Center in Carmel, too.

But the point is that Carmel ought to be able to take care of its own citizens and their needs first. An accomplishment of that magnitude would, indeed, be a source of civic pride. And a good place to begin is with some serious discussion — and action — to implement a badly-needed city recreation program.

The Mayor's Report

Bridge-building progresses

between city and businesses

By CHARLOTTE TOWNSEND

HAPPILY, it seems to be a time for "bridge-building." Last week in this column I reported on the combined meeting between our city council and the board of supervisors and expressed the hope that this meeting and talking together signalled the onset of a "new era" in communication and cooperation between our two bodies.

Now representatives of two sectors which have often found themselves at odds have met in a spirit of cooperation. I'm referring to the "Mayor's Business/Residential Ad Hoc Committee" which met one morning recently in city hall.

There were 10 people present, four representing a cross-section of the business community: Ed Doran, George Greenwood, Max McKee, and Curt Spradley; residents Katherine Lewis, Hazel Mohler, Peter Scott and myself. Douglas Peterson, city administrator, also was present for information and advice.

This was a "ground work" type of discussion, with broad-ranging ideas and topics. Some things discussed were: how the business community feels about its role in the village; why residents don't shop uptown; whether quality is changing everywhere; how to encourage resident-oriented business; reducing the size of the business district; the post office; amount of time spent in council discussions.

Also discussed were the effects of planning 20 years in the past and 20 years in the future; whether the residential district has changed less than the business district and why; absentee property owners; spending habits of the older person and the less affluent; second kitchens and "living in common;" traffic and parking; translating desires into general laws; how to encourage "good landlords."

Doran said he would study business failures in Carmel and report. At the end of the meeting, Spradley said: "The city is all of us." And Mrs. Mohler commented: "Our problems overlap." It was a spirit of working together that animated the meeting and I really feel that this group of intelligent and caring people are well on the way toward meeting common goals.

We've had some exceptionally beautiful days and evenings lately. I hope all of us will try to take time to look at the water and the trees, and to sense and appreciate some of those very special things this unique locale affords. "All the good little things in life" are so precious and so often overlooked.

July 4th controls may be tightened

CARMEL MUST tighten restrictions on the Fourth of July even more in 1983, according to City Administrator Douglas Peterson.

Peterson has recommended that the city council provide daytime police foot patrols, expand no parking areas and further restrict fire locations.

"We've just begun to make a dent in the problems," Peterson told the Pine Cone/Outlook. "We've just begun to bring it up to an acceptable level of control."

The Carmel City Council enacted sweeping parking and traffic controls, with restrictions on beach fires, this year in an effort to control huge crowds which generally gather on Carmel Beach on Independence Day.

Peterson said he does not plan to ask for immediate authorization for the new measures. "This is not an urgent kind of thing. We're going to study it and then talk about it some more later," he said.

In a report to the council dated Aug. 3, Peterson said: "As with any new endeavor some lessons were learned. Based on these, staff will recommend implementing some modifications for next year. These would include:

- "With the reduction in crowds it is suggested to have police patrolling on the beach itself during daytime hours. This would be done to maintain contact with the public, remove any illegal fireworks and inform the public of applicable regulations.

- "Possible further tightening of beach fire regulations. The city forester has suggested limiting fires only to the area from Eighth to Santa Lucia avenues on the flat portion of the beach.

- "Some additional supplementing of police personnel through use of officers from other jurisdictions may also be advisable."

Peterson did not specifically mention the increase in the no parking zone in his memo, but he told the Pine Cone/Outlook that staff will investigate whether to expand the parking prohibition zone.

An ordinance enacted by the council last month prohibited parking on Scenic Road from Santa Lucia to Eighth avenues on July 4.

It would be "impossible" to say at this time how large a no-parking zone may be needed next year, Peterson said.

Police Chief John McGilvray agreed that staff should consider use of a foot patrol in 1983.

"We haven't gotten into any planning for next year at all," he said. "It will depend upon our available manpower. I'm sure it will be discussed further."

PROGRESS was made this year in controlling problems associated with crowds on the Fourth of July — as dramatized by this

PETERSON BELIEVES the proposed new controls, combined with measures taken this year, would "succeed in returning this observance to a family-oriented activity."

Total cost to provide beefed-up municipal services this Fourth of July was $8,810, of which $3,835 was attributed to new restrictions enacted this year, Peterson said.

Tow-away signs, rental of a tow truck and police overtime to enforce the no-parking zones cost the city $1,485.

Payment to police officers from outside agencies cost $1,280 and overtime for city public works crews amounted to $1,070, according to Peterson's report.

Other costs associated with the Fourth of July included $2,475 for Carmel police overtime pay, $1,500 for payment of forestry department salaries, and $1,000 for chemical panorama of Carmel Beach on July 4, 1981 — but still more stringent measures are needed to return the event to a family-type toilet rental. These costs were not directly related to the new crowd-control measures, Peterson said.

Monterey County Dist. Atty. William Curtis announced Aug. 16 his office has found no evidence that Carmel police used excessive force to disperse a late-night crowd on the beach on July 4.

Chief McGilvray had asked Curtis to investigate the incident after several members of the crowd complained of excessive police force and claimed that the fire department, called to extinguish an illegal bonfire, sprayed people on orders of a police officer.

The incident occurred at about 11:30 p.m. when officers tried to break up a crowd of about 100 persons on Carmel Beach.

In his report to the council, McGilvray said: "After this group refused to extinguish the fire and disperse, the fire department was requested to extinguish it. The group was then dispersed by police officers after it reduced in size.

"Ten persons were taken into custody. However all but one were released after being interviewed at the police department. Several officers sustained minor injuries in the confrontation."

In a statement to the Pine Cone/Outlook, Curtis said: "Based on the interviews with more than 20 people, we could find no substantial evidence that there was excessive force used." However, Curtis said police should have blocked off the area and ordered the crowd to disperse before the officers moved into the crowd to break it up.

McGilvray said he is "satisfied" with the results of Curtis' investigation.

"I'm satisfied that the district attorney conducted a thorough and objective investigation," he said. "I'm satisfied with the results."

Planners to grapple with spread of T-shirt shops

CARMEL CITY Atty. George Brehmer believes it will be difficult — but not impossible — for the city to regulate T-shirt shops.

Brehmer and Planning Director Robert Griggs are to present a proposal for the regulation of T-shirt shops when the Carmel Planning Commission meets in a special study session at 4 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 25 at city hall.

The city council reviewed the T-shirt ban proposal July 20, but referred the development of a possible ordinance to the planning commission. The commission is responsible for review of proposed land use ordinances, after which it makes a recommendation to the council.

Brehmer believes that one key roadblock to passage of an ordinance is "equity" among businesses.

"The problems involved are the regulation of businesses and the regulation of uses. They must be equitable in respect to business and uses of the same type," he said.

"If we set up a zoning district and authorize the sale of clothing, you get to the problem of trying to work a distinction between types of clothing.

"There is a valid distinction between old and new clothing, but the distinction between the sale of T-shirts as opposed to the sale of hand-made silk shirts is not clearly defined. It is very difficult to come up with a distinction that is legally enforceable."

But Brehmer believes that it is possible to develop an ordinance. "I always want to say that nothing is impossible. I'm not going to close the door on some type of creative approach. I never like to look at things and say they are impossible," he said.

Many municipal ordinances hinge on requirements to maintain "the health, safety and welfare," of a community, but T-shirt

THE CARMEL Planning Commission will discuss potential limits Aug. 25 on new T-shirt shops. Sharon Miller (above), manager of Carmel Shirt Works on Mission near Ocean, helps customers select a T-shirt. She said T-shirts are not a fad and are inexpensive gifts for the tourists and residents. (M.G. photo) shops probably would not fall under this provision, Brehmer said.

"You could ban the sale of clothing that has sufficiently high propensity to catch fire," he said. "But when you get down to regulation of types of merchandise, it gets more difficult the more innocuous the merchandise."

Brehmer said the "health, safety and welfare" provision is used more often to control pornography and liquor businesses.

"It is easy to classify those businesses, but how can you compare them to a T-shirt store?" he asked.

EVEN THE regulation of window displays that advertise the shirts would be difficult to justify legally, Brehmer said.

"Just merchandise for sale in the store displayed in the window has the same difficulty. I think there are certain difficulties that need to be worked out before we can

A plea to city council to support water project

CARMEL WOULD only hurt itself if it chose not to participate in a proposed $80 million water project zone, a director of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District told the city council Aug. 17.

Edwin Lee of Carmel, one of seven members of the water district board of directors, pleaded with the council not to withdraw from plans to augment water supplies on the Monterey Peninsula through another dam on the Carmel River, underground storage in Seaside, and conservation.

The Carmel City Council has expressed strong reservations about the proposed water project zone, and individual members have said they would not support it because they are dissatisfied with Monterey County planning and land use decisions which have allowed growth to proceed at the mouth of Carmel Valley.

Council members have continued formal action on the water project zone until their Sept. 7 meeting. If the council chooses not to participate, Carmel residents would not be able to vote on the proposed $80 million water project zone and Carmel would not share in additional supplies of water produced by the zone.

"In about a year, there'll be a reduction in water from the Carmel River," Lee told the council. "Studies show that there is an underflow in the Carmel River and that Cal-Am (Water Co.) is pumping from that underflow."

The water district has received a $50,000 state grant to determine whether there is underflow pumping. If there is underflow, it would be subject to regulation by the State Department of Water Resources. The state could then require that a portion of the water in the Carmel River be left intact to preserve fish and game habitats.

"I predict that Fish and Game will take an even more stringent approach, and your 5.5 percent allocation will be reduced," Lee said. "You'll be using more than your allocation and you'll have no new connections. You'd stop population growth in Carmel but you would not stop population growth in Monterey or Carmel Valley."

The council took no action on the water project zone, but in other business the council:

- Voted unanimously to terminate annexation proceedings for the 170-acre unincorporated Carmel Woods area.

- Approved on first reading an ordinance to regulate the division of businesses into merchandise marts.

- Continued consideration of a proposed agreement between the city and the owners of the Pine Inn for a joint parking facility to Aug. 24.

- Continued to Sept. 7 an appeal by George Brook-Kothlow of a board of adjustments decision to deny him a use permit for a restaurant on the south side of Ocean Avenue between Mission and San Carlos streets.

School board meets Aug. 25

The Carmel Unified School District Board of Education will consider a 25 cent increase in cafeteria lunch prices when it meets at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 25, in Room 2 at Carmel High School.

In 1981-82, lunch prices were $1.25 for elementary school students and $1.40 for high school students.

Why council supports Hatton Canyon Freeway

"appears to be the only psychologically satisfactory alternative to a six-lane road up the grade."

LLOYD SAID he had hoped that a "concrete bridge-type structure" which would allow the roadway to be built above the canyon would be feasible, but Cal-Trans officials have ruled that out as too costly.

Beckstead told the council Aug. 11 that a raised structure would be "terribly expensive, and would cost 'four or five times as much as an earth fill type highway.'" That type of structure would also require supporting columns "80 or 90 feet tall in some places," Beckstead said.

"The choice is there, not only as a matter of convenience, but as well as money," Lloyd said. "I support the construction of the freeway as the only possible alternative. The Carmel Valley Master Plan and the water situation should handle the question of growth."

Councilman David Maradei said he has "leanings" toward support for a Hatton Canyon highway, and said he hopes the council will take a clear position on the project so that the city and county can speak with a unanimous vote when the state transportation commission holds its rescission hearing. No date has been set for that hearing.

"The county and the cities affected by this all seem to want it," Maradei said. "It will be better for Carmel if we solve that intense traffic problem. I'd probably be in favor of it, but I would have to see if there are any good arguments against it."

"Development at the mouth of the Valley has created a serious traffic problem; it would be a serious mistake to completely eliminate the alternatives regarding a Hatton Canyon Freeway. I'm concerned that if the right-of-way is rescinded, it would be replaced by development which would aggravate the situation," Maradei said.

"It's really a rock and a hard place. I think we should take a clear stand, then it will be up to the county to run with this."

Councilman Robert Stephenson said he also favors a Hatton Canyon road, "if we use the term scenic parkway."

"I'm very much in favor of it, but I see no necessity for a high-speed freeway," Stephenson told the Pine Cone/Outlook. "We could have something divided so the cuts and fills are reduced. Removing trees doesn't worry me too much; they'll come back. Messing around with the present highway is a short-term solution."

"I don't see any argument against the Hatton Canyon road. If we can stop development at the mouth of the Valley and bring the Hatton Canyon road up to capacity to handle the traffic we have, then we've reached equilibrium. The real problem is too many people."

Mayor Charlotte Townsend said "the consensus on the council seems to be that, over the long term, the Hatton Canyon parkway is the solution."

"It's the kind of situation where you're damned if you do, and damned if you don't," the mayor said. "My problem is that the funding is seemingly impossible for the next 15 to 20 years. Whatever we do will disturb some people."

"Planning to control growth is supposed to happen at the other end — with the county. They've already developed the mouth of the Valley; they've done an end run and they're not going to stop. We're suing the county because of that growth down there," Mayor Townsend said.

"People are using the downtown streets of Carmel for a detour because of the mouth of the Valley. The answer is, we'd better start electing people in Salinas who can do the right thing."

FIFTH DISTRICT Monterey County Supervisor William Peters called on the council to support the Monterey County Transportation Commission in its request for an early, local hearing on the proposed freeway rescission.

"My personal support is for an environmentally sensitive project," Peters told the council. "A local group of landscape architects worked to design the Carmel Hill interchange. It might be a positive step to form such a committee for the Hatton Canyon road."

Peters said an early hearing on the proposed rescission would increase its chances for inclusion in the 1983 state Cal-Trans budget.

"It was (State Transportation Director) Adriana Gianturco who recommended this rescission," Peters said. "Whoever is elected governor will appoint a new director, and the transportation commission will wait until Mrs. Gianturco is out of office before it makes a decision."

Jesus Garcia, Cal-Trans district director from San Luis Obispo, said the 30-year-old Hatton Canyon proposal has been assigned "a relatively low priority" and the Cal-Trans administrative staff has recommended rescission.

"The main reason is that we do not see in the foreseeable future the funds to build the project," Garcia told the council. "Our priorities are a statewide problem. A lot of projects are federally matched, so there is very little money we can apply for projects like this."

Webb Beckstead, deputy district director, said if the project is rescinded, "it would mean the right-of-way would be put up for sale to state or local agencies first, and then to the general public."

"The project would move about one million cubic yards of earth; a regular freeway would move three or four times as much earth," Beckstead said. "There would be an interchange at Carpenter and at Carmel Valley Roads, with no points of access between those points. It would join Highway 1 in a two-lane section somewhat beyond Rio Road."

"It would be seven to 10 years, at a minimum, to complete it if we had approval today," Beckstead predicted. "The environmental review would take a long time. If controversy develops during the environmental process, then there is no end."

Beckstead said a "minimum time, without controversy" for construction of the Hatton Canyon road would be seven to eight years from the date of approval. Widening Highway 1 to six lanes with a center lane would cost $3.7 million and would take "probably three years" to complete after approval, Beckstead said.

The seven-lane widened Highway 1 would occupy about 85 feet of roadway, which would be within the 120-foot right-of-way owned by Cal-Trans, except for a 100-foot stretch near Carmel High School, Beckstead indicated.

"If we widen Highway 1, we'd already run into trouble in the 1990s, four or five years after the facility is completed," Beckstead said.

In response to a question from Carmel City Administrator Doug Peterson, Beckstead said factors used to determine the priority of freeway projects are accident rates on existing roadways, and the amount and duration of traffic congestion.

Evidence of continued controversy over the project was presented again. Michael Kelley of Carmel Hills said his Save the Hatton Canyon Committee has collected some 2,000 signatures of Carmel area residents opposed to the freeway; Oliver Wood of Hatton Fields said the Hatton Canyon Parkway Committee has signatures of some 4,000 persons in favor of retention of the right-of-way.

that type of program have been diminishing over the years," he said.

And the California Transportation Commission allocated those scarce funds which are available with preference for Southern California. Sixty percent of available funds go to Southern California projects, 40 percent to Northern California, Garcia said.

WEBB BECKSTEAD, deputy district director of Cal-Trans, outlined costs involved in the Hatton Canyon Freeway project and widening of Highway 1 to seven lanes.

AN EXAMPLE of the type of project which competes with the Hatton Canyon Freeway for that ever-diminishing pool of funds is the Crosstown Freeway in Santa Barbara, which was supported by the Cal-Trans administration, Garcia said.

"We included $6 million in the budget to purchase the right-of-way, but it just barely made it into the budget," he said. "It was in competition with all the other projects."

The Cal-Trans staff draws up a "candidates list" of road projects throughout the state, then ranks those in funding priorities. The state transportation commission then reviews and approves or disapproves those priorities, he indicated.

"The Hatton Canyon Freeway is not even on the candidates list," Garcia said.

Garcia said the top priority for expenditure of Cal-Trans funds, by state law, is rehabilitation and resurfacing of existing roads. The second priority is meeting safety needs; the third is relief of traffic congestion; and the fourth priority is new construction, he said.

From the 11-cents-per-gallon tax on gasoline, four cents goes to the federal government and seven cents is returned to California. Of that seven cents, half is designated for local governments to use on road projects, and half goes to Cal-Trans, Garcia explained.

Those federal tax revenues are distributed proportionately higher to states — such as Nevada — with few roads and few cars, Garcia said. "California is a 'donor' state, which means we raise more taxes than some other states."

Although state law has ranked new road construction as a bottom priority, the Cal-Trans budget does not reflect that, Garcia said.

"The transportation commission has decided to budget our five-year program to get the most federal dollars," he said. "That means that we're actually spending more dollars statewide on that fourth priority — interstate roads."

Garcia said the Hatton Canyon Freeway would, in fact, be a freeway although it has been designed to minimize environmental damage to the canyon.

"Some people don't want to call it a freeway," Garcia said. "They envision something like the freeway projects down south or in the bay area. We say, in essence, it is a lower-design road but it's still a de facto freeway because there will be limited access."

"A freeway is a controlled access road.

The lesser design standard means you can build sharper curves and steeper grades to conform to the contours of the canyon."

The design speed of the Hatton Canyon road would be 45 miles per hour, with grades of up to 7 percent, as compared with grades of no more than 3 percent on the standard freeway designed for 70 miles per hour.

JESUS GARCIA, Cal-Trans district director, told the Carmel City Council that funds to build the Hatton Canyon Freeway might not be available for 15 to 20 years.

Carmel merchants appear skeptical about second-story business scheme

By MICHAEL R. GARDNER

A PLAN by former Carmel Mayor Gene Hammond to eliminate second story retail businesses could create more problems than it would solve, opponents say.

Hammond's proposal that the city adopt a 20-year amortization program to convert second stories of retail structures to apartments will be addressed by the Carmel General Plan Advisory Committee at 7:30 p.m., Aug. 19 at city hall.

The committee — of which Hammond is a member — is charged with revision of the 1973 Carmel General Plan, before it is sent to the planning commission for public hearings, then to the city council for adoption.

Hammond believes his plan could provide more housing, stop the proliferation of tourist-oriented businesses, and ease parking and traffic problems downtown.

Although his plan would mostly encompass second stories, Hammond said it is necessary to include "retail businesses above other retail businesses" to eliminate confusion. He said the plan should cover businesses on third floors, basement levels and second stories.

But several area businesspeople have expressed reservations about the plan. They claim it would be difficult to implement, infringe on private property rights and reduce sales tax revenues.

"It's totally illogical to amortize existing structures. The property owners depend upon a certain income. To amortize the retail uses would cost the property owner money. It is just inconceivable," said Maggie Hays, resident manager of Carmel Plaza.

"How much rent do you think the landlords would charge for those apartments? Would anybody be able to afford that kind of rent?" she asked.

Mrs. Hays said the program would create vacancies in second story structures that would lead to "degradation" of the downtown area.

"The next thing they would suggest then is that these vacant structures be used for low-income housing. That would bring on the bureaucracy. We would get people who are unfeeling to the needs of Carmel and a great rift would naturally exist.

"I think historically the city of Carmel has done a great deal with its architecture. If you start whittling down on your business district, you start whittling down on the income of your community," she said.

Mrs. Hays believes apartments above restaurants would be "tremendous" fire safety hazards and that noise problems would exist.

Parking problems would increase, not diminish as Hammond says, Mrs. Hays claimed.

"Everybody knows that everybody who rents has one car at least. Put everyone and

MAGGIE HAYS, resident manager of Carmel Plaza, says a plan to amortize second their cars downtown and where are the businesspeople and visitors going to park?" she said.

THE CARMEL Business Association will probably discuss Hammond's proposal when the merchant group meets Sept. 14, Vice President George Greenwood said.

"We'll have to study it. I don't say we support or don't support it now," Greenwood said.

Greenwood, who is manager of the Carmel office of Wells Fargo Bank, said he personally does not believe the plan is feasible.

"One of his (Hammond's) objectives is to alleviate the parking problem. I question whether that would be achieved through these means," Greenwood said.

Greenwood said his family has three cars and "if I were to rent one of these apartments, where would we park? It would just increase the problems. I can see the problem compounded rather than solved."

The proposal would not decrease the number of tourist-oriented businesses in the commercial district, Greenwood believes.

"I wonder whether a study of second story businesses would indicate whether a great number of tourist-oriented businesses exist on the second floor," he said. "I think those businesses that serve tourists will want first floor space."

Greenwood said the loss of second story business sites would create an artificial shortage and push rents higher. He said low volume resident-oriented businesses would not be able to afford the rents.

Remodeling costs would be "horrendous" and the city could not afford to help the landlord cover those costs, Greenwood added.

"The whole complexity of the situation just boggles the mind," he said.

Greenwood believes there would be a "proliferation of lawsuits" against the city if the proposal is adopted. He said there are legal questions whether the city can allow certain uses on first floors and not on second floors.

He said legal technicalities over private property rights would also have to be considered.

'It's totally illogical to amortize existing structures. The property owners depend upon a certain income. To amortize the retail uses would cost the property owner money. It is just inconceivable,' said Maggie Hays, resident manager of Carmel Plaza.

Hammond's proposal has also irked Ken Goold, who owns commercial property on the northeast and southeast corners of Ocean avenue and San Carlos street.

Goold said he wanted to build apartments on the second story of the Goold Building, northeast corner of San Carlos and Ocean avenue, but the city would not grant him a use permit.

"They put me all through this several years ago. I wanted to put apartments downtown, but they wouldn't let me," he said. "I'm not going to remodel them again. That's silly."

After the city rejected his apartment plan,

Goold rented some of the space for the offices of the Pine Cone/Outlook. There is also one apartment upstairs adjacent to the newspaper office.

Goold said he is against the proposal. "Absolutely. They didn't want the apartments several years ago. If they change their minds, I just won't rent them out," Goold said.

Alan Williams, a member of the General Plan Advisory Committee and local contractor, said he wants to remain "neutral" on the issue until he can study it in more detail.

"My concern is that the pendulum swings so far in one direction that you can throw the whole town out of balance," Williams said. "The net result of over-reaction is we could put Carmel in economic jeopardy."

Williams said two-thirds of the multi-level Carmel Plaza would have to be converted to apartments if Hammond's proposal is adopted.

'TWENTY TO 25 percent of the sales tax revenue for Carmel comes out of the Plaza. Should we risk losing that?' he asked.

Williams said the committee needs to look at a broader spectrum: "The problem with the General Plan Advisory Committee is that we're looking at businesses and not uses."

"We need to look at what kinds of uses we want, where we want them and how we can get them here," he said.

Hammond first made his proposal public during the committee meeting Aug. 5.

Hammond believes the current city ordinance that governs businesses on two levels is "ambiguous and unenforceable" because second stories are not defined. The ordinance also does not include specific amortization programs to eliminate those uses, he said.

If the city would adopt measures to increase housing availability downtown, the influx of residents would also attract locally-oriented businesses, Hammond said.

In making his presentation, Hammond said: "There's no time left for small dreams. We've got to do it and we've got to do it big."

Hammond said people who would rent converted businesses as apartments would shop downtown. The extra dollars would offset the loss of sales tax revenue caused by the decrease in stores.

Amortization would not cost the city money, Hammond claims. He said the city could give landlords a "reasonable" amount of time to recover their original investment before the property is required to be converted into apartments.

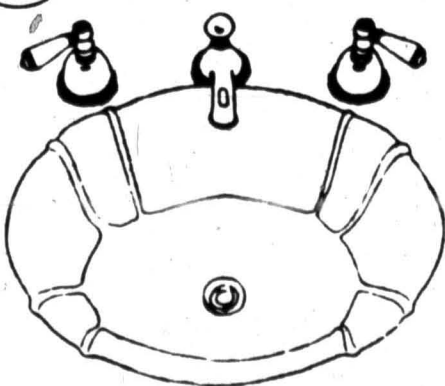

Hammond added that Carmel Plaza "is a big enough entity" that it should be considered individually.

"I would hate to see the Plaza be the thing that caused something like this not to happen. I could care less about the Plaza. I would hate for the Plaza to be the thing to defeat this."

The committee meeting is open to the public and comments from the audience are solicited during discussions.

The panel is charged with the development of recommendations for the revision of the 1973 Carmel General Plan. Those proposals will be presented to the planning commission this fall. The city council is expected to adopt the revised general plan in early 1983.

Planners move to regulate spread of T-shirt shops develop any regulations," he said. Planning Commission Chairwoman Sandy Swain believes the city can regulate the T-shirt stores somehow, but does not feel that controls can be placed on window displays.

"I don't see how we can," she said. "How can you go around and tell people what to put in their windows?"

Griggs said one difficulty is to define a T-shirt shop. In Carmel, there are several stores that sell T-shirts, but there is only one that specializes strictly in T-shirts: Carmel Shirt Works, Mission Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues.

Sharon Miller, manager of Carmel Shirt Works, said she understands why the city is concerned about the business.

"T-shirts are always going to be in style; they're not just a fad," she said. "They're just a nice, inexpensive gift to take home."

Paul Laub, who owns Laub's Country Store on the southwest corner of Ocean Avenue and San Carlos Street, believes the city should re-direct its efforts.

"I think the city should take a positive approach and start working toward what they want," he said. "The city should focus energy on building things instead of tearing them down."

Laub believes that city officials should focus on how to attract desirable businesses instead of "wasting their time" on regulating other shops.

"I share their concern. They obviously feel there is a proliferation of T-shirt shops, but I don't believe they want to get rid of all T-shirt shops. I think they're more interested in how to attract desirable businesses and visitors."

"The city has the Bach Festival. Why not a Mozart festival? The city could direct its efforts toward attracting people here they want," he said.

During the council meeting July 20, Mayor Charlotte Townsend voiced displeasure over the proliferation of tourist-oriented window displays and shops.

The mayor said "they could destroy Carmel" and are "deteriorating the atmosphere and quality of all things that are right with Carmel."

COUNCILWOMAN Helen Arnold said the city needs to address the entire issue of tourist-oriented businesses and not just regulate T-shirt shops.

"We're trying to put out brush fires like T-shirts," Mrs. Arnold said. "This year it is T-shirts. Next year it could be hats and the next year coffee mugs."

The city has a moratorium on the expansion or creation of new tourist-oriented businesses unless they can be "reasonably expected" to be included in the general plan, which is now under revision by a citizen's committee and a planning consultant.

Griggs said he does not believe the moratorium on non-resident businesses can be used to ban T-shirt shops if they sell other kinds of clothing because the stores could not be classified as novelty shops.

The council became concerned about the increase in T-shirt displays and shops after an application was made to the Business License and Code Review Board to open Classic

Griggs told the board that the application does not violate the moratorium because it will sell men's and women's clothing.

Steven Moder, president of Mainland Co., the parent company for Classic Shirts, said the business will sell more than T-shirts.

The company was founded as "Crazy Shirts," which started as a T-shirt silk-screening business.

"Over the years, we've become more conservative. The company evolved into the manufacture of embroidered sportswear, ladies' lightweight jackets, beach clothing and Norfleet knit shirts," Moder told the board.

INJECTION WELL in Seaside was tested for pressure by hydrology consultant John Logan of Carmel (left) and Monterey Peninsula Water Management District research consultant Frances Krebs (right). Nancy McClintock, chairwoman of the district board of directors, also came to the site of the test. (R.M. photo).

Seaside recharge scheme will need more testing

By ROBERT MISKIMON

MORE TESTS will have to be made to determine whether it is feasible to store additional drinking water underground in Seaside by means of injection wells.

Preliminary test results by John Logan of Carmel, hydrology consultant to the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, and staff research analyst Frances Krebs were encouraging but incomplete, Ms. Krebs said.

The injection well in Seaside is part of a $40,000 project authorized by the board of directors to determine whether excess water from the Canada de la Segunda pipeline — which carries water into the California-American Water Co. system from the Carmel Valley aquifer — could be injected and stored underground in Seaside.

If tests indicate that a sufficient amount of water could be injected and stored in the Seaside aquifer, as much as 9,000 ac. ft. of additional water could be pumped back into the system as needed, Logan explained.

Current productive capacity of the Cal-Am system is about 20,000 ac. ft. of water per year and current annual demand is about 16,000 ac. ft. Demand is expected to reach 33,000 ac. ft. by the year 2020, according to water district estimates.

One acre foot of water is the amount of water required to cover one acre to a depth of one foot, or 325,851 gallons.

The injection system — if it proves feasible — would draw water from the pipeline during "wet" years when there is an excess of water from the Carmel River which flows into the sea. The recent tests have measured the rate at which water can be pumped underground.

Tests were performed at a well site on Plumas Lane in Seaside. An injection well consists of an underground pipe fitted with dispersal holes, connected to a water main. Pressure within the water main drives the water underground, Ms. Krebs explained.

"We found the average rate of injection to be 120 gallons per minute," Ms. Krebs told the Pine Cone/Outlook Aug. 16. "That's between 96 to 126 gallons per minute. To have a worthwhile project, we'd need about 200 gallons per minute."

The rate at which water can be pumped underground will determine how many injection wells would be needed to produce sufficient storage capacity. The original idea was to place six injection wells along the eastern border of Seaside, Ms. Krebs said.

"If we could only get 50 gallons per minute in the injection well, then we'd need 20 wells to get another 1,000 ac. ft. per year of storage. If we can get in 200 gallons per minute, we could do it with five or six wells."

More tests are needed to determine whether a faster rate of injection can be achieved with a larger line between the water main and the injection well, Ms. Krebs said. And an underground pipe which runs deeper than 190 feet used in the original test well might also boost the injection rate, she said. "We plan another test to find the relationship between water pressure and the injection rate," she said. "We don't know if it's feasible yet."

The water management district has proposed augmentation of underground water supplies in Seaside as one way to increase total water supplies to Cal-Am customers on the Monterey Peninsula.

The Seaside injection project is included as part of a proposed $80 million water project zone tentatively scheduled to go to voters in November of 1983. A total of $2 million would be allocated for the Seaside project, if tests prove promising and voters approve of the district.

A proposed new dam on the upper Carmel River with 27,000 ac. ft. storage capacity would cost about $77 million, and would be decided by voters in the same election. Water conservation, for which $20,000 per year would be budgeted, is the third component of the proposed water project zone.

An earlier test to determine whether a fresh water barrier could be created underground in Seaside close to the ocean — as another means to augment storage capacity — showed that soil is "too permeable" in that area to create a fresh water barrier, Ms. Krebs said.

The source of water for the Canada de la Segunda pipeline is the reservoir behind San Clemente dam — which provides roughly 60 percent of the flow — and Carmel Valley wells — which provide about 40 percent. The injection project would siphon off excess winter runoff which would normally spill over the dam.

A study by WWD Corp. for the water management district estimates that about 2,300 ac. ft. per year would be available about half the time from the Carmel River which would be used for additional storage in Seaside.

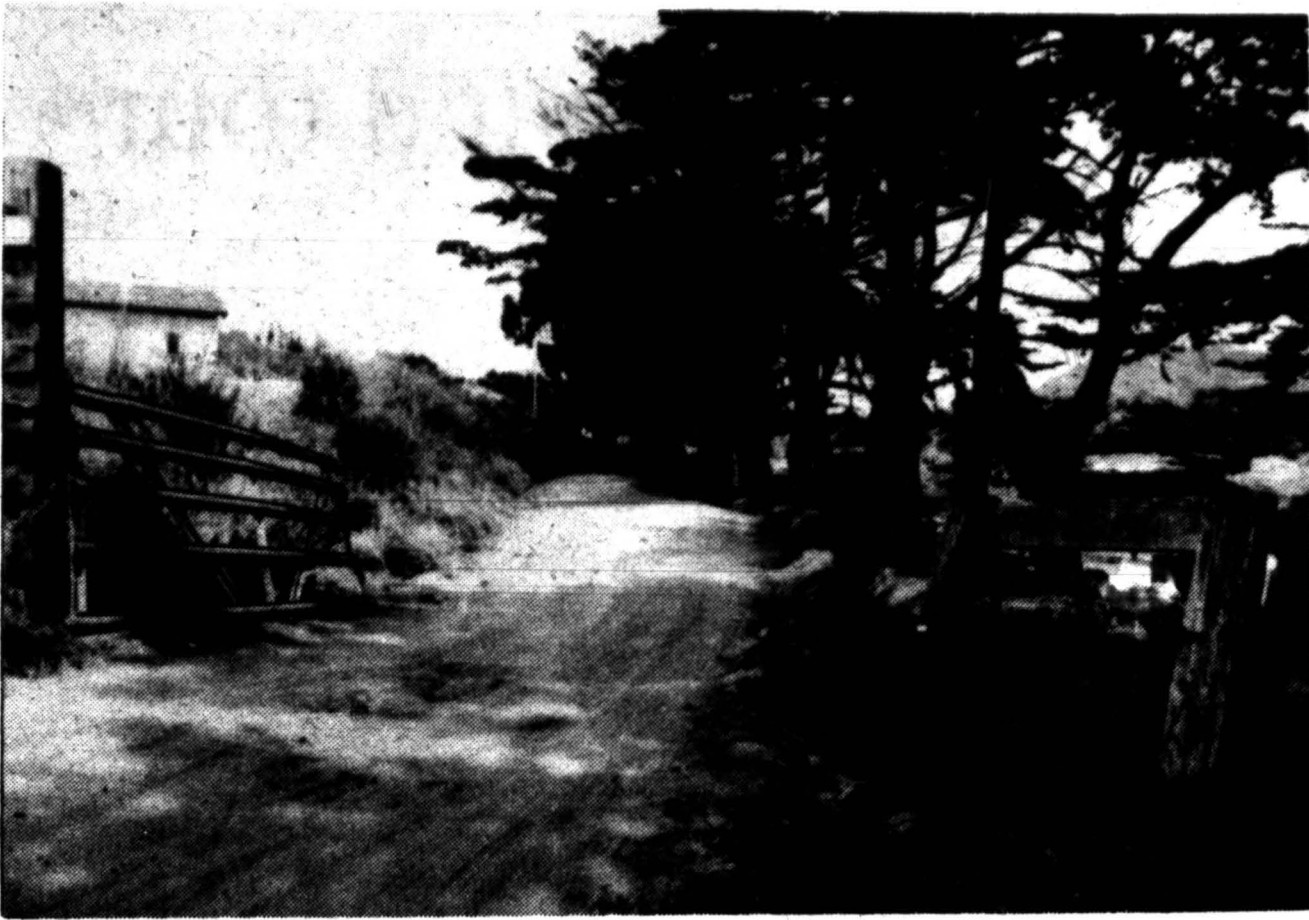

Ms. Krebs said results of the recent tests will be submitted to the board of directors at its Sept. 6 meeting in Monterey City Hall.

Auction raises $7,486

A total of $7,486 has been raised as the result of an Aug. 13 art auction to raise funds to purchase a whale sculpture for the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History, said Curator Vernal Yadon.

"We've exceeded our goal of $24,000," Yadon said. "We now have $28,000 for the purchase of 'Sandy' and the remainder will go toward a patio, sandbox and retaining wall on the Central Avenue side of the museum to be known as 'Sandy Plaza'."

The sculpture of the grey whale was created by nationally-known artist/sculptor Larry Foster of Castro Valley.

Sanitary district seeks location for access road

By MICHAEL R. GARDNER

THE CARMEL Sanitary District Board of Directors wants to build a $300,000 office building but can not seem to find an access road acceptable to the public.

Directors will meet at 1:30 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 26 at Carmel City Hall to explore various locations for a road that would provide access to its proposed new office building on district property south of the Youth Baseball field on Rio Road.

District Manager Michael Zambory said he will recommend that the district use an existing dirt roadway off Lasuen Drive.

Zambory's recommendation is expected to be reviewed by the land and land use committee before the directors meet. The committee may also develop other alternatives for consideration by directors.

The proposed road off Lasuen Drive is south of Carmel Mission and stretches east to the proposed office building site. The road is currently used for access to Hodges Landscape Supply.

The approximately 700-foot Lasuen route would cost about $36,000 for improvements and paving. Zambory said the district would not remove the existing trees.

"We don't want to tear down the trees," he said. "We would probably have a one-lane road until near the office when it would be widened to about 20 feet."

Zambory said he believes the Lasuen route is the best compromise available.

"It would probably cost more dollars, but on the other hand, it would mitigate the concerns raised by the neighbors," Zambory said in reference to strong opposition to an earlier proposed access drive off Rio Road.

"The easiest choice was Rio Road. Now the people object so we back off of Rio Road. But we shouldn't back off of Lasuen. We can't hurt anyone there. We wouldn't hurt a soul. I think it would be unfair if they fought the Lasuen alternative."

Directors will probably face some public opposition to the Lasuen access road.

Elizabeth Bell, president of the Concerned Neighbors of Mission Ranch, told directors in a previous board meeting that any attempt to use Lasuen would be "resisted."

Mrs. Bell told the Pine Cone/Outlook that the group will probably oppose the proposal but said she couldn't comment publicly until a meeting of the board is held.

LASUEN DRIVE area residents were successful three years ago in a fight to stop a Carmel city plan to use part of the Hodges property as a temporary storage area for debris gathered by streetsweepers.

A strong public outcry forced the city to abandon the plan, said Planning Director Robert Griggs.

Griggs said the residents were concerned about the safety of children in the area because large trucks would use the road.

Zambory said no large sanitary district vehicles would be allowed on the road. The trucks would be parked at the district sewage treatment plant farther south of the proposed office site. Access to the plant is provided by a road off Highway 1 just south of the Carmel River.

Zambory predicts that employee vehicle traffic to the new office site will average about eight trips per day. There would also be traffic generated by persons with business at the district office.

The $300,000 building would provide 2,000 sq. ft. of office space for four employees plus

'The easiest choice was Rio Road. Now the people object so we back off of Rio Road. But we shouldn't back off of Lasuen. We can't hurt anyone there. We wouldn't hurt a soul. I think it would be unfair if they fought the Lasuen alternative.'

a room for board meetings. The board of directors now meet at Carmel City Hall.

The district now rents office space in the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center for $650 per month.

The original proposal by directors to build a new access off Rio Road met with strong opposition from Carmel Mission officials, the Carmel Youth Baseball Board of Directors, and residents of the Mission Fields subdivision.

The district proposed construction of a road west of Mission Fields Drive. It would have stretched 570 feet south between the baseball field fence and residential area fence line to the proposed office site behind the diamond backstop.

Mission officials said they need the property to meet state requirements for school site acreage and also for additional space to handle the increased number of visitors if Father Junipero Serra is canonized. If Father Serra is made a saint, church officials plan to expand the current parking lot.

Residents complained that the road would generate more traffic and noise. Youth Baseball officials said the road would create a dangerous situation for youngsters using the field.

In a stormy board session in July, more than 100 people came out to protest the Rio Road access. Directors then continued any action until the land use committee develops alternative proposals.

IN OTHER action, directors will discuss a recent sewage rate increase initiated by the Pebble Beach Community Services District, formerly the Pebble Beach Sanitary District. Directors raised the annual service charge to $90, nearly double the former $51.40.

Zambory said he will place the service charge increase on the Carmel Sanitary District Board of Directors' agenda because of remarks attributed to Pebble Beach director Richard Lord after the July 30 board meeting that blamed Carmel for the rate hike.

Lord told the Pine Cone/Outlook that the money is needed to cover the Pebble Beach share of the Carmel water reclamation project costs. Pebble Beach is required to pay about $760,000 of the $18.4 million project, which will provide more disposal capacity. The reclaimed water will be sold to area golf courses for irrigation.

"What you have to realize is that Carmel, with its reclamation project, has committed itself to a program that requires an enormous amount of working capital," Lord said.

Lord pointed out that Pebble Beach is concerned about a cash shortage because state and federal reimbursements for capital outlay for the project will not "come on a routine schedule."

"You never can be sure when the money is going to come in," he said.

State and federal grants — if final approvals are granted — will pay 87.5 percent of the project costs.

Lord added that the Pebble Beach district has "cash assets" of nearly $2 million, but most of that money is earmarked for a capital improvements project to upgrade facilities and meet state demands for a backup electrical system in case of a power outage.

Pebble Beach has had problems with sewage spills which resulted when electrical power stopped and the pumps could not operate.

Pebble Beach directors also raised the rates because of an increase in charges by Carmel for sewage disposal, he said.

Under terms of the contract, Carmel treats and disposes of Pebble Beach sewage at a cost based on flow. In 1981-82, Pebble Beach paid $223,000 for the disposal of 289.3 million gallons of effluent.

The 1982-83 contract price has been estimated at $250,000. The final cost to Pebble Beach is determined in June when disposal figures for the fiscal year are final, Zambory said.

Carmel youth returns from European band tour

By ROBERT MISKIMON

"I FEEL personally that you can do anything you're willing to work for."

Those are the words, not of a Dale Carnegie graduate, but of 16-year-old Paul Everts of Carmel, who has returned from a month-long musical tour of Europe as a percussionist with America's Youth in Concert.

Everts' enthusiasm springs not only from the tour itself but also from the fact that more than $3,500 to finance his trip was raised through contributions from local citizens and organizations.

At the time he received word in May that he had been invited to join 300 other high school musicians from all over the United States, Everts wasn't sure whether he would be able to finance the journey.

Paul lives with his divorced mother — a secretary at Monterey High School — and his two sisters. He also works at Carmel Drug Store, but the $3,500 tuition for the musical tour was clearly outside his family budget.

So friends at Carmel-High School put on a couple of bake sales to raise money, and contributions began to come — as a result of his mother's unstinting efforts on his behalf and newspaper publicity. Eventually, the full $3,500 was raised.

"The high school band and the Key Club both put on bake sales, which raised $156," Everts said upon his return to Carmel. "The Monterey County Symphony Association gave me $250, and I got $100 from the student bodies of each of the three schools I've attended — Carmel Woods, Carmel Middle School, and Carmel High School."

There was one large donation from a well-known local celebrity who wished to remain anonymous, and numerous other, smaller contributions, Everts said.

"How could anybody think they can't do something?" Everts asked rhetorically. "I've learned that anything can happen if you have a positive attitude."

Everts was one of just two high school musicians from the Monterey Peninsula who went on the tour. The other was Mari Henderson, a viola player from Pacific Grove. Paul's optimism spills over to prospects for continuation of his musical education this fall at Carmel High School, where he will be a junior.

"The band will be at least twice as big this year," Everts said. "We only had about eight kids in the band last year; we should have at least 16. I've already spoken to Gary Stotz, the new band teacher, and I'm really looking forward."

THE MUSICAL tour of Europe lasted from July 1-29, and started in New York City, where the fledgling concert musicians sweltered in city heat as they rehearsed for a Carnegie Hall concert.

"I was in charge of getting all the instruments on and off the bus," Everts said. "Sometimes it was over 100 degrees. We practiced every day until our concert July 5, when we got a standing ovation at Carnegie Hall."

The orchestra then flew to London, for a concert in Watford — a small town on the outskirts of London. That concert was filmed for broadcast on BBC and possibly for American television later this year, Everts said. They took the ferry across the English Channel to Paris, where the students performed two concerts on July 13.

There, the heat and humidity played havoc with their ranks, Everts reported.

"Some of the people started to faint in the Notre Dame Cathedral," Everts said. "Five girls in the choir fainted during rehearsals. One of the guys in the choir fainted right before performance and went into convulsions."

"I was the only one who could speak French, thanks to my years of French at Carmel High."

Everts acted as interpreter for his stricken comrade before, during and after his hospital visit, where the two were detained until 11 p.m. Everts filled out his friend's medical form and stayed with him until he was released.

When it was all over, he said: "Thanks for saving my life," Everts said. "The next day we had a concert in Notre Dame with 5,000 people. When we played 'The Battle Hymn of the Republic' at the end, the audience started clapping and singing along."

Next stop was Grenoble, where the musicians stayed in the 1968 Olympic Village. When they arrived in Florence, Italy the entourage found that their concert had been cancelled so the auditorium could be used for a Communist Party rally.

"Politics plays a part in everything, I guess," Everts reflected.

That disappointment was more than offset by standing ovations in Rome and in Venice, he said. But his favorite European city was Lucerne, Switzerland where "it was rainy and foggy, just like Carmel."

The final concert was in Strasbourg, France, where "the town council gave us a buffet and a red carpet welcome," Everts recalled. "Our last concert was that evening on July 27, and we had two encores."

Because he had lugged the other musicians' instruments faithfully around the Continent, Paul prevailed upon his fellow percussionists to let him take the snare drum solo at the start of their final number, "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," which ended his trip on the upbeat.

Library annex plans hinge on underground parking lot

By MICHAEL R. GARDNER

ARCHITECTURAL PLANS for the Harrison Memorial Library annex building will be delayed until the city of Carmel reaches an agreement with owners of the Pine Inn on a proposed underground parking garage at the site. Library trustees are to meet Tuesday, Aug. 24 to review the status of annex plans.

"It's somewhat of a complicated situation, with the Pine Inn and parking facility," board president Francis Herrick told the Pine Cone/Outlook. "We can't do any design until the city decides on an architect. An architect cannot be determined until an agreement is reached with Pine Inn."

The city council is negotiating with Pine Inn owners over the shared cost of a multi-level underground parking garage below the proposed library annex on the northwest corner of Lincoln street and Sixth avenue.

Library trustees have already hired the Monterey architectural firm of Hall, Goodhue, Haisley and Barker to design the 8,700 sq. ft. annex estimated to cost $900,000.

However, the council has yet to approve that firm as the agent for the proposed underground parking facility. Until the architectural firm is agreed upon by the city, specific annex plans can not be designed, Herrick said.

"The annex and parking garage are designed to be built in conjunction with one another. Therefore, we should have the same architect," Herrick said. "We must have the same design, but we will have two separate contracts for construction: one between the library and the architect for the annex and one between the city and the architect for the garage."

Annex architect Donald Goodhue estimated that if the underground parking garage and annex were built at the same time, it would save approximately 5 percent of the costs. Goodhue said a contractor would be able to save on fixed costs such as supervision; concurrent construction would also reduce construction time.

Alan Williams, designer for the parking facility, told trustees the library would not have to pay for the support foundations and concrete floor of the annex because they would be constructed along with the facility. Williams estimated the savings at approximately 20 percent.

The city owns three of the five parcels where the parking garage-library annex would be built. The other two lots, owned by the Pine Inn, are on the south side of Sixth between Lincoln and Monte Verde. They are presently used for guest parking.

Preliminary plans for the underground parking garage envision a two-story, $620,000 facility that would provide 95 parking spaces — 68 for the Pine Inn and 27 for the city.

HERRICK and the annex committee met with Goodhue for a 90-minute session Aug. 12 to review the scope of work planned and costs.

A complete report on the meeting is expected to be presented to the full library board when it meets at 4 p.m. Aug. 24 at city hall.

The board is scheduled to approve a formal contract with the architectural firm. Goodhue had served the board on an advisory basis, Herrick said.

Herrick said monetary provisions in the contract were discussed at the annex committee meeting "just in generalities." He said he did not want to release specific details until the board meeting.

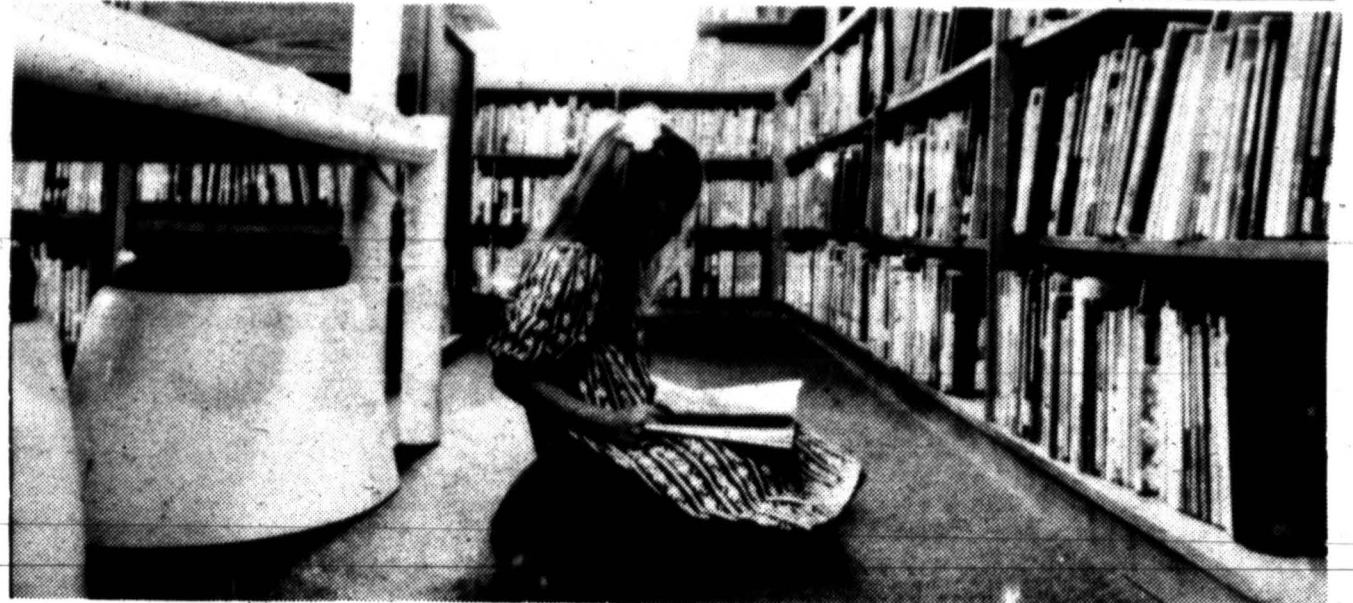

Architects usually charge a flat fee for the design plus about 10 percent of the total cost of the project. If the annex is constructed for an estimated $870,000, the total fees for the architectural firm would be in the vicinity of $100,000. That would make the annex nearly a $1 million project.

Despite costs, trustees believe that construction of the annex is imperative.

Preliminary plans indicate that the annex would be an approximately 8,700 sq. ft. structure. Trustees have indicated they would prefer a one-story structure with provisions included to allow for a second floor to be added later.

Trustees have agreed in concept with a proposal by Library Director Peg Richter that the annex include children's services, technical services, special collections, a meeting room, staff lounge and public restrooms.

Miss Richter said "at least" one additional AUTUMN FUENTES of Watsonville was visiting Carmel with her parents when she discovered the peaceful quiet of the Harrison Memorial Library children's department. If a proposed annex is constructed, the children's department would be moved from its downstairs location to the new building. The library board of trustees will discuss annex plans Aug. 24. (Michael R. Gardner photo).

staff member would have to be hired if the children's department remains open the same amount of hours as the main library building.

The problems of paying for the annex operation once the physical structure is completed have also been discussed in board meetings.

"I think it's very important that the board develop a plan for funding the operating expenses of the annex at no additional cost to taxpayers," Miss Richter said.

Miss Richter has suggested that the board work with the Tor House Foundation to seek grant funds.

Members of the Tor House Foundation have told trustees they will help solicit grants for the annex if the library will include a special room in the new building to house the manuscripts of poet Robinson Jeffers.

Funds for construction of the annex have been accumulated through a special endowment fund, which now totals nearly $750,000.

THE ENDOWMENT fund was established by trustees in 1977 because many contributions to the library were strictly for building purposes, said Pat Sippel, former board president and member for nine years.

The endowment fund is restricted for use in construction of an annex by the library board by-laws and only a two-thirds majority vote (four members) could change the rules.

Despite the current money problems and threats by the county to reduce reimbursements to Carmel library for providing services to non-city resident patrons, Mrs.

Sippel believes monies for an annex would be well spent.

The county, because of its own budgetary problems, wants to reduce reimbursements to Carmel library from $160,000 in 1981-82 to $110,000 this fiscal year. The contract between the county and Carmel expired June 30 and has been extended on a month-to-month basis until a new agreement can be reached.

"I don't think the people of Carmel should be denied an annex just because it serves county people. That wouldn't make sense," said Mrs. Sippel, who retired from the board in 1980.

"I don't think there is any question that something needs to be done," she said. "The idea of an annex, I feel, is long overdue."

Mrs. Sippel was on the board in 1971 when trustees attempted to have the entire library moved to a proposed new $500,000 building on Sunset Center property at the northeast corner of Eighth Avenue and Mission Street.

The proposal called for the city to provide the land. The original library building would then be converted to another use, such as a museum or shops and offices.

In an advisory measure on the ballot in 1972, Carmel residents rejected the proposal by a nearly three-to-one margin. The overwhelming vote forced the city to abandon the plan.

Mrs. Sippel said trustees decided to shelve all proposals for an annex when the county announced five years ago its plans to open a branch library at the mouth of Carmel Valley.

Business association to work closely with city

By FLORENCE MASON

"WE ARE a little village. We like to treat our visitors as if they are visitors to a little village."

"I'd be willing to bet that we save the city over $25,000 a year."

"I believe we now have the best opportunity we've ever had for working compatibility between the business community, the residents of Carmel, and the city."

In each of the above quotations, "we" is the Carmel Business Association. Lee Chamberlin, executive secretary, offered the first two; Curt Spradley, president of the board of directors, the third.

The Carmel Business Association is almost as old as the city of Carmel. It traces its existence to 1928. This year, for the first time, the association's board of directors decided to approach the city budget process from a very different point of view. Instead of asking for a grant under the social services budget, where they have been funded for many years, the board decided to go out on a limb and to request a contract for services with the city for $12,000. (In 1980, the city gave the CBA a grant of $1,640 and in 1981 it provided $2,180.) By unanimous vote, the city council turned down the contract and with it the $12,000. What the city will give the CBA this year will be decided under the social services budget in several months.

The CBA president talks like an optimist despite his disappointment.

"With the new city council and Mayor Townsend, I believe we have the best opportunity we've ever had for a working compatibility," Spradley said. "Already, with the cooperation of the mayor, we have a new committee that's a fine cross-section of the city's business interests. It represents banking, the hostelry industry, retail shops, restaurants and other services; it will work in conjunction with the mayor and her (as-yet-unnamed) committee of citizens at large. That fits right in with the CBA's message: we of the business community really have the same problems that the city as a whole has."

Concerning the village character of Carmel, Lee Chamberlin denied accusations that the CBA encourages tourism.

"What we do is a very soft sell. It's the Bach Festival and the Crosby and the U.S. Open that bring tourists here. You would have to stop publicizing the Bach, stop having the golf tournaments on TV. People all over the world have Carmel on their hidden agendas."

As for recent concerns about the number and character of certain businesses in Carmel: "We don't encourage that, either. We don't grant business licenses, the city does. It's the prerogative, privilege and responsibility of the city council and city administration."

WHAT THE CBA does do, Lee Chamberlin said, is counsel those who come and ask about business opportunities in Carmel.

"I'm realistic with them," she said. "Many of them don't know that we don't even have light industry here, that tourism is our primary industry."

What is striking about tourism is that it is not an industry that can pick up and move elsewhere, Mrs. Chamberlin said. She wonders if the city knows "subliminally" that it doesn't have to worry about the industry moving away and that the 56 percent of the city budget that comes from hostelry and sales tax revenues is something that can be counted on.

Another characteristic of tourism, according to Lee Chamberlin, is that tourists get blamed for a lot. "But often it's only the tourists who stayed as residents that can be blamed! For example, for tree problems, including the fact that many sidewalks and driveways are buckling because of tree roots."

We talked some more about the services the CBA gives to the city — that saving of "over $25,000 a year." Just one example: "The traffic control officers hand out guides. That takes just about one second. But more closely with the city on issues that will affect the future of Carmel. (M.G. photo).

it takes three minutes or more to do what we do here with each person — directing them, telling them where they can stay, answering their many questions," she said. It is that kind of direct service that the CBA believes makes it different from the "social service" organizations with which it has been identified for budgetary purposes throughout the years.

"By asking for a contractual relationship, we tried to make the city cognizant of what we do for them, why we're different from such organizations as the Alliance on Aging and Planned Parenthood. We're an adjunct to the city!" Mrs. Chamberlin said.

"We're told that business people don't attend council meetings. Well, many of the businesses in Carmel are 'mom and pop' businesses. After working from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. every day, the owners have to come back and stock shelves, work on their orders, and so on. They just don't have time to go to meetings."

One way the CBA attempts to bring the public into collaboration with business is to invite the public to attend all CBA meetings. That's something new this year. Previously, the public had only been invited to specific meetings on topics of interest to them.

CBA president Curt Spradley, who is the owner of El Topo restaurant and who has been active in the CBA almost as long as he has been a Carmel businessman, said that one objective of the CBA this year is to hold more meetings of interest to the entire community. As an example, a recent meeting featured the district attorney, the sheriff, and Carmel Police Chief Jack McGilvray. The panel discussed and answered questions about crime as it relates to both business owners and residents.

Speaking to the question about proliferation of certain kinds of businesses, Spradley echoed Lee Chamberlin's thoughts that the CBA's role is counseling would-be local business owners.

"There's no question that the business community is concerned when we have that proliferation," he said. "I would like to see the CBA take an even greater role in the counseling of people interested in starting businesses here, telling them about the problems of the community, what services are needed," He and Mrs. Chamberlin agreed that the CBA can only help those who come there for such help. Spradley added: "Many people don't want free advice, unfortunately. "But it is still a moral concern to us," he concluded. Speaking of the recent attempt to get a change in the CBA's relationship with the city, Spradley said that in most communities where there is just a business association (in lieu of rather than in addition to a chamber of commerce) the business association is on a contract basis, in recognition of the services it renders directly to the city.

SPRADLEY and Mrs. Chamberlin also agreed on the need for better demographics. As Spradley said, "People who do come here to start businesses in Carmel should be better informed about demographics," Spradley said. "The planning department would have to take the time to give them out."

The CBA's work is to answer telephone inquiries about every aspect of Carmel business, residential and visitor life (more than 600 calls per week were handled in 1981). It also handles inquiries in person and by mail. It assists the police department through the CBAAlert, arranges small business conferences, promotes local activities of all kinds. Through its newsletter, it advises members of new laws and regulations as well as providing statistics.

All of this is handled by a paid staff of two workers, both part-time. They are Lee Chamberlin, who is supposed to work from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. ("but I seldom get away at that hour") and Julie Felis, administrative assistant, who works from 10:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. This year, a request has been made to the city for an additional part-time worker. The association has also been blessed, as Mrs. Chamberlin put it, by devoted volunteers — as many as four on the roster at one time.

"But we just train them and then they take that training and go off and get paying jobs!" she lamented. Currently, there are two volunteers who help with all the tasks. Right now a major one is getting out the latest edition of the CBA "Guide to Carmel-by-the-Sea," a directory of member businesses. Five thousand copies are distributed to members of the association and to all boxholders in the Carmel-by-the-Sea post office.

Funds for the operation of the CBA come from only two sources: membership fees of $85 per year and city of Carmel grants.

When Lee Chamberlin opened the door to start her business day, two couples who had been waiting followed her in, along with me, and the questions started immediately. The phone rang, almost without stopping, during our visit. "The statistics of our activity are almost overwhelming," Spradley said.

This year's president of the CBA was president of the Chamber of Commerce in the Orange County town of La Habra, with population around 45,000, before he moved to Carmel. "I moved here by choice," he emphasized. "It's not my idea to change Carmel; I like it the way it is."

"No one has the right to live and work in the community without giving something back in return," Spradley said. His service to the CBA is his answer.

EXECUTIVE secretary Lee Chamberlin has been with the Carmel Business Association since 1974. Her education and training were in engineering. She lived in Alaska and worked for the Corps of Engineers when her husband died. They had traveled around the world, and had seen Carmel. Tired of traveling, Mrs. Chamberlin decided to settle in Carmel. Before she came to the CBA she had worked as finance advisor to Girl Scouts of America and executive director of the Monterey Bay Girl Scout Council.

Both the executive secretary and the president of the board of directors of the Carmel Business Association agree that tourism is here to stay. Their approach is, as Mrs. Chamberlin put it: "Let's make the best of the situation we have and work with the city in it."

City Councilman Robert Stephenson said there was not a lot of discussion about the CBA request to operate on a contractual basis, and said he was curious about why, after all these years, the association wanted a formal contract.

"I think the council wasn't convinced about the association saving the city a lot of money," Stephenson said. "Many of the services they fulfill, they invite. The CBA generates these services themselves, through their promotional activities."

"I recognize their value and I'm well aware that the business district does support the town to a great extent. I guess my question is: if there was not CBA, would we still have the motels full?" He suggested that perhaps they would be filled, since tourists come through word-of-mouth advertising and because of their "hidden agendas," as Lee Chamberlin put it. Stephenson was asked if his comments meant that he didn't want the town promoted and he laughed and said, "Perhaps not!"

Business Beat

Harriet Duncan's has a new owner

By FLORENCE MASON

"A BUSINESS we are all very proud to have in Carmel" will stay here despite its long-time owner's recent death. And it will remain much the same, according to its new owner.

That was assured by Pernie McMahon, the new owner of Harriet Duncan's dress shop on Sixth Avenue. She told the Business License and Code Review Board she does not plan any changes in the 35-year-old business and will continue to offer the same quality and type of merchandise. "Harriet Duncan's has been successful there for 35 years, so I have no plans to change the name or what is offered," she said.

Board member Glenn Crawford spoke of residents' pride in the store. Sandy Swain echoed his comments, saying, "I'm delighted! I wish you all kinds of luck, though I don't think you'll need it."

That reference may have been to Mrs. McMahon's first Carmel business - Pernie's of Carmel, a dress shop that has been on San Carlos Street south of Ocean Avenue for more than 20 years.

Mrs. McMahon said she will have a manager for each store. "You'll see the same salespeople at Harriet Duncan's and perhaps some new faces too," she said. Pernie's will stay Pernie's and Harriet Duncan's will offer the same lines that it has offered. The two stores will retain their individual characters. "There would be no point in selling Pernie clothes in the new store," Mrs. McMahon said.

She said she had no specific plans to take on a second store but that after Harriet Duncan's death in June, she found herself talking to a broker about it and asking some important questions. "Then it just fell into place; it was an opportunity."

Mrs. McMahon, a widow, lives in Carmel Woods. Her interests for many years have included Zonta, a service club, although she is presently inactive.

CARMEL: HISTORICAL PURPOSE VS. REGULATION?

James Orlando Ogle wants to continue to paint portraits in the Doud Arcade and merchants in the vicinity support him in that hope, but the Business License and Code Review Board had to say no.

"I'm sorry we can't be more accommodating," said City Administrator Doug Peterson. Board member Vern Allred, assistant fire chief, put it more strongly: "It boggles me that a community founded on art and artists has no working artists."

Ogle, who signs his work "James Orlando," found himself up against not one but several city laws: a business license was in question because he did not have a fixed location; if his business qualified as a gallery, one current moratorium would require a use permit from the planning commission; another requirement is that all businesses in Carmel be conducted within an enclosed space, which would not be satisfied by its location within an interior mall. Enclosed or not, there would be a question of zoning regulations for using that type of space. Under both the current "small space" moratorium and the proposed permanent regulation, the owner of the building would have to add a parking space and make other significant changes.

Facing such a formidable array of negative pronouncements, the lone artist made an emotional plea for his right to create and display his talents in a place he described as "an open studio."

"I need this kind of atmosphere," he told the board. "It's hard to make a living as a portrait artist in any other setting."

Members of the board attempted to be helpful, and suggested that he work in an adjacent shop whose owner is one of those concerned about his not being allowed to work in his chosen space. This would have to be on an employer-employee basis. Ogle said he didn't think he could make a living there and said there wouldn't be enough room.

Planning Director Bob Griggs suggested that he look for an opportunity to work in an already established gallery. "I've been to most of them, and I can't get inside them," Ogle said. "This is my last resort." He said he feels his location is special and that the circumstances are special, so that granting him a license would not lead to a "rash" of such applications.

"That's the problem. We're bound by laws that are blind to individual circumstances," City Administrator Peterson said.

The board's action was to refer "the general issue" to the city's planning commission. The "issue" is whether any change in existing regulations is advisable in order to allow "the more unfettered practice and merchandising of art."

Ogle left for a short vacation in Yosemite. But he will be back, he said with determination. "I'll still sketch," he told me, adding that certain stores will carry his work, including the Work Center in Doud Arcade. To appeal the board decision, he would first have to apply for a business license. If that is denied, he could appeal to the city council.

"I still feel it should be a legal place to conduct a sketching business," he said.

Ogle's appearance before the Business License and Code Review Board was initiated by a formal request from his friend and attorney, Lawrence Marquette. Marquette expressed much of the same frustration in legalistic terms.

"Ogle is in a morass of regulatory jurisdiction," Marquette said. "In the last 15 or 20 years, Carmel has regulated itself up to the nines. The people who are benefitting most are those who own commercial property and the class already involved in multiple shop businesses."

Marquette believes that Ogle is deprived of his right to carry on a legitimate business, although he recognizes that this business is more consistent with what he knows of Carmel's history than with present zoning strictures.

"Carmel has forgotten its reason for being," he said.

The mid-Valley attorney looks beyond the limits of city regulations.

"I looked at state law," he said. "I question the validity of Carmel's interim or 'emergency' small space moratorium. Where is the statutory predication for it? It's not a question of the community's health, welfare or safety. I don't believe it is the zoning purpose the state Legislature intended. Can they even use the zoning laws of the state at all for this purpose?"

He also questions the city action on other constitutional bases, such as equal protection of the law.

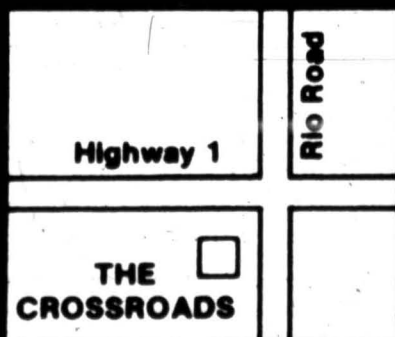

In spite of these legal questions, Marquette advised Ogle not to try to deal with the city of Carmel, but to take his portraits to the Wharf or Cannery Row. "Unfortunately, James finds this (the Doud Arcade) the best single place in the whole Peninsula for him to do what he is doing."

SOMEONE'S DOING SOMETHING RIGHT

On the sunnier side (which could be a reference to its Carmel Valley location), there is Quail Lodge. Intrigued by reports that the lodge has just received the Mobil Five-Star Travel Guide Award for the eighth consecutive time, I had to find out how a 100-room hostelry finds itself with the same top rating as the Fairmont in Dallas (800 rooms) and only six other hotels in the United States. That's among 20,000 lodging establishments rated by the travel guide.

The first thing I learned was that it's not an award you can apply for. Ed Haber, president of Quail Lodge's parent Green Meadows Co., said he knew nothing about it until the lodge won its first such award eight years ago. But there's lots a hotel can do — and the Quail Lodge does it — to maintain the quality for which the travel guide inspectors look.

"We have never seen a list but I've heard that there are 200 different things they check," Haber said. "Everything from the entrance, how our phone is answered, the demeanor of the desk clerks — all that before they ever get to a guest room. To get four stars or more, we understand that the hotel also has to supply certain amenities like shower caps, shampoo, special soap, the best quality towels. It's a white glove-test, literally. And we hear that they get reports from guests, too."

The hotel doesn't know when it is going to be inspected. Again, it's just what Haber has heard: that they come four times each year. The person doing the inspection only announces himself the fourth time, after he has completed his stay there as a guest.

What does Quail Lodge do to please its own guests and not incidentally to earn such a distinguished honor?

"We make sure the rooms are meticulously kept up. We have maids and checkers and after that, the housekeeper checks every room. Then two other people from the office make random checks independently. So at least five people see each room. We're very thorough. The travel guide inspectors apparently check everything, including the kitchen, and there just can't be many defects. We pay tremendous attention to detail, have the amenities, and are constantly refurbishing."

Haber said lodge employees take a lot of pride in the plaque and ribbon displayed there for the past eight years. "It helps a great deal that we have had the same fine housekeeper for 12 years and the two assistants have about 10 years each with us. We've had the same gardener for more than 10 years."

Once a year there is a sit-down dinner to honor the workers who have made it all possible. Everyone who has worked for Quail Lodge five years or more is given a five-star pin.

Haber has been with the company 20 years and with Quail Lodge, which he helped to build, for all of its 15 years. Haber accepted the award for the lodge at ceremonies in San Francisco — for all the employees.

IN CASE YOU WONDERED

Last week we reported that Jan Durney and Suzanne Lehr will open a shop for the sale of sportswear and dancewear on Dolores Street. Last May we reported in this column the opening of Scandinavian Imports at that location by partners Ken Schemmel and Jean Mouton. Why such a rapid turnover?

Schemmel said it is because their ultimate plans were stymied. The import shop was kept open, he explained, while they explored the possibility of putting in a bakery. After much discussion with city officials, it became apparent that their hopes could not be realized.

"It was mostly a question of the age of the building and the cost to remodel it for a bakery," Schemmel said. "We decided it just wasn't worth our investment."

The partners, together and separately, own a number of other local businesses including the Swedish Restaurant (next door, but not affected by the closing of the import shop). They will watch for other opportunities, Schemmel said. In the meantime, Scandinavian Imports would be a good place for some early Christmas shopping; by the time this article appears, the inventory clearance may be up to 50 percent off.

THE CROSSROADS NOW HAS A MANDARIN

"All my friends love my food!"

Now Kathy Liang makes that food available to a much larger circle of friends: the patrons of her new restaurant at The Crossroads.

Another spur to the opening of the Mandarin Restaurant was the fact she and her husband, airline pilot King Chung Liang, travel a great deal and like to go to nice restaurants wherever they are. It seemed logical to Kathy to provide Carmel residents and visitors with a nice Chinese restaurant.

Mrs. Liang credits her chef with special culinary skills. He is from New York and has had 10 years' experience, she said. The restaurant menu includes choice dishes from many areas: Peking, Shanghai, Szechwan, Hunan and Canton.

If a customer has a favorite dish that isn't already on the menu, the chef will be delighted to prepare it. Both lunch and dinner are offered, in an atmosphere enhanced by carved screens and handpainted ceiling panels.

This is Mrs. Liang's first restaurant venture, but not her first business in Carmel. That was a gift-shop — Cathay of Carmel — in The Barnyard. She closed that shop last December to concentrate on the Mandarin.

The Liangs' daughter, Anne, and son Andrew — both graduates of Carmel High — have been helping to get the restaurant embellished and ready to open. Anne will return to UCLA and Andrew will be a freshman at USC this fall.

THE BIB 'N TUCKER IS TWO

... In number, not years. A children's shop where the children can come and play while their mothers browse has just opened at The Crossroads. The name will be familiar to Carmelites — it's another Bib 'N Tucker.

The new store is larger than its Ocean Avenue parent, owner Wendy Grover told me, and for a reason: customers often ask for children's shoes, and there isn't room for them in the Carmel store. Also, while we talked on the telephone I could hear young voices in the background and the sound of a music box. "Lots of space for them to play in," Mrs. Grover said.

Wendy Grover is the daughter of the Carmel shop's owner, Willa Aylaian. Mrs. Grover grew up in Saratoga and grew up, also, with her mother's shop, working there off and on for about six years.

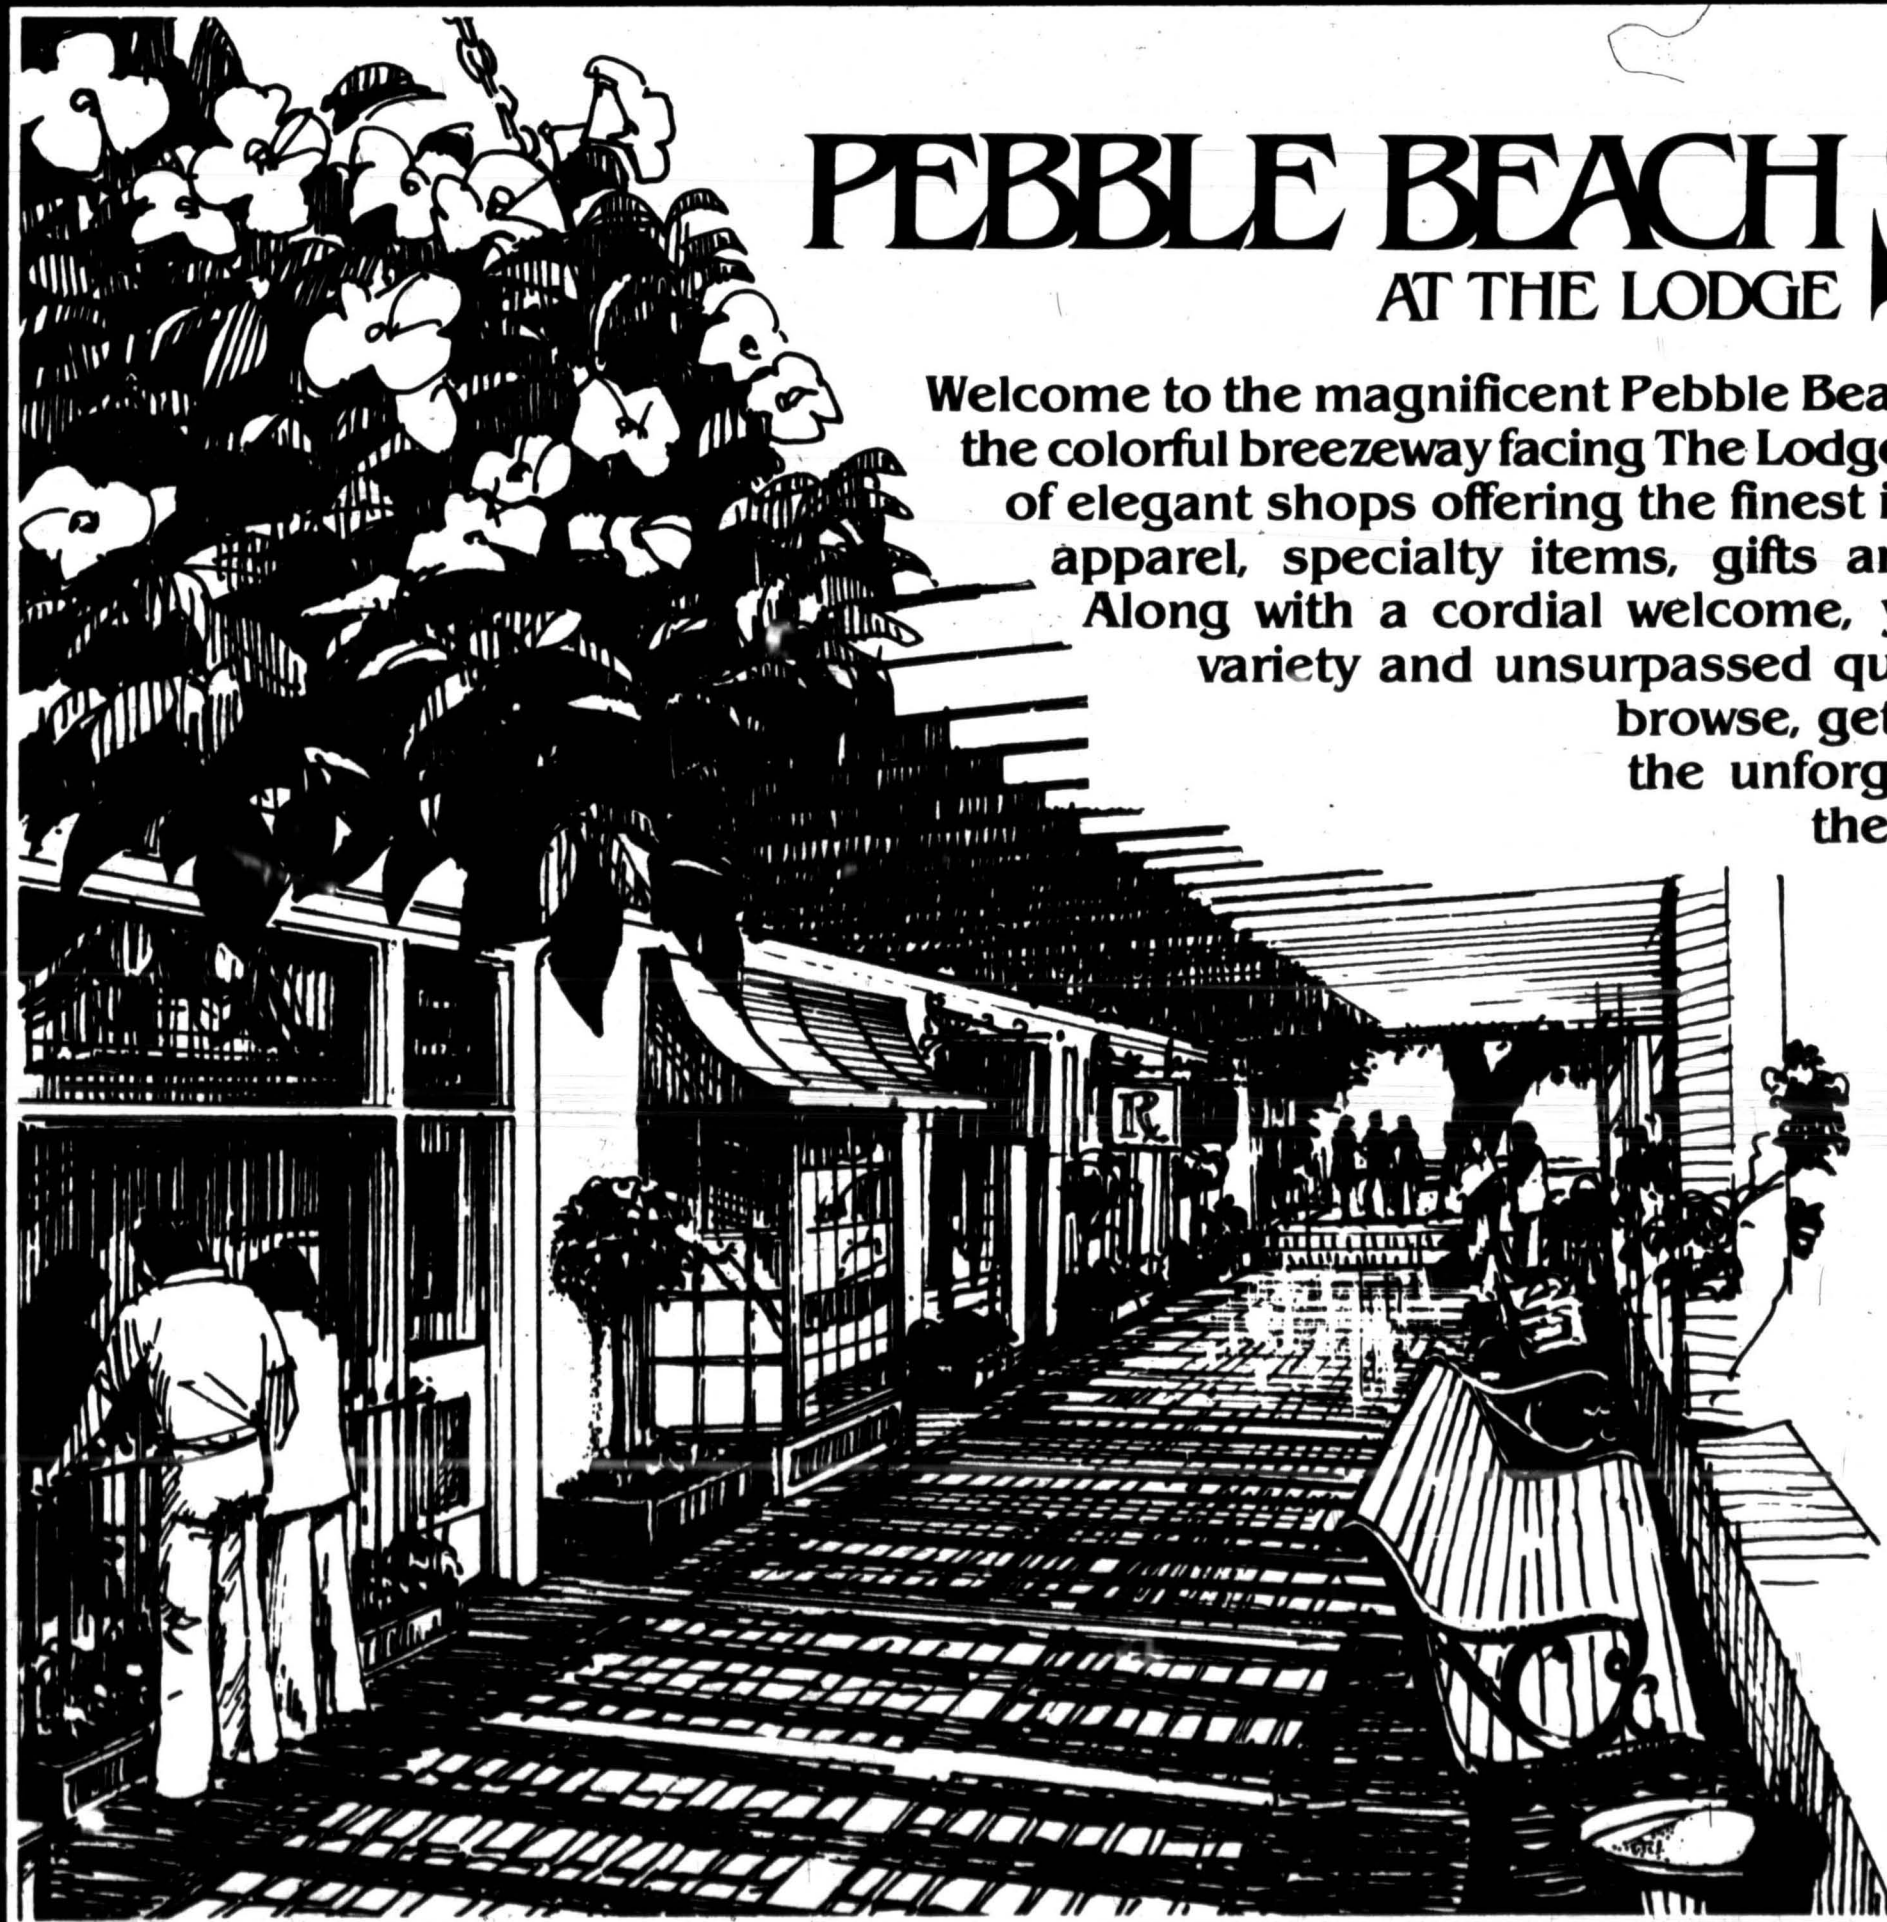

The Crossroads shop has much the same merchandise as the Carmel one, with two special additions: shoes and maternity clothes.

Married to Jeffrey Grover, a civil engineer, Wendy delights in the couple's Mercury sailboat which is moored in Stillwater Cove between cruises. She also describes herself as an avid tennis player.

GAHAGAN REACHES TENNIS FINALS

Will Gahagan of the Carmel Valley Racquet Club reached the quarter finals of the recent National Seniors Hardcourts tennis championships at Santa Barbara's Montecito Country Club. Paired with Tani Tanasascu, former Romanian Davis Cup star, now of Palm Springs, his "pickup" 70's division team lost finally to a top-seeded team of Harry Hoffman and George Reynolds 2-6, 7-5 and 6-2. (Hoffman won the 70's singles event.)

In the singles, Gahagan lost in the first round to sixth seeded Bill Collins of Baltimore, Md. 3-6, 6-4 and 6-3. Collins was a finalist in the 1981 National Claycourt tourney.

In the finals of the 70's consolation singles event, Gahagan was forced to retire with a pulled muscle, while leading 6-2 and 2-3 over Harley English of Davis, to whom he had lost in the finals of the recent Pacific Grove Feast of Lanterns tourney in a three set, two-and-a-half hour match.

Gahagan will play in this week's National Senior Indoors at San Francisco in the 65's division, paired with Don Allen of Carmel Valley, and will leave later this month for the National Grasscourt tourney at Providence, R.I.

Don't try to convert wild animals to pets

By JUDITH A. EISNER

A TEENAGE FRIEND of our daughter shrieked delightfully the other day: "Guess what we got? We got a baby raccoon!"
animal we have heard enthusiastic reports about. "It's so cute!" the girl enthused. Of course it's cute. All babies are cute, be they puppies, kittens, raccoons, humans or any other species. That does not, however, mean they are equally suitable for domestic life.

We have a friend who is experiencing nature to its fullest up in the mountains and meadows of Oregon. A well-meaning neighbor, knowing she was "animal-oriented" (an understatement!) brought her a baby skunk he found along the roadside. It proved to be a delightful little half-grown menace, still fully-equipped with "skunk power" and an innate curiosity and lack of fear. It played about the house and grounds like a striped kitten, "attacking" the feet of terrified humans and occasionally punishing the resident canines and felines for their transgressions on its territory.

Our friend's rapidly-graying veterinarian insisted the skunk must go: he could blind the dogs as he gets older and his spray more potent, or possibly even contract and spread rabies. He claimed it was risky business to inoculate a "natural" skunk!

Another friend kept a "tame" opossum. It, too, had been brought to her as a tiny baby. Among the problems with opossum-keeping, she discovered, is the fact that this nocturnal creature has extremely weak, light-sensitive eyes.
Exposing it to direct sunlight was obviously painful and it preferred to sleep inside all day and awaken after dark. Other problems ranged from its developing crippling arthritis (common, the vet said) to its dietary requirements and the fact that it had to be caged practically all the time for its own safety. Some life ...

BUT BACK TO our baby raccoon ... We met the little creature — a male — a few days later. He was, indeed, quite tame, and very cute. He climbed all over us, nuzzled our hair and "chirruped" when he felt threatened. We felt threatened, too. Even babies bite and scratch.

We explained to the girl that wild animals frequently revert to their natural instincts when they reach sexual maturity and raccoons are capable of being very aggressive and very accomplished fighters. A grown male raccoon can literally tear a German shepherd dog to shreds; the sight is not a pretty one.
Were they prepared to neuter this creature to prevent such problems from occurring? And would they find a cooperative veterinarian?

Experienced animal people, including zoologists and veterinarians, accept the fact that it is practically impossible to successfully raise a wild animal in a domesticated situation and then continue to keep it once it matures. The adorable lion, tiger and leopard kittens that must be taken from their mothers in public zoos and hand-raised eventually go back to the zoo.

With a wild creature, unless you decide to render it sterile and defenseless (through neutering and removal of claws and fangs), you never know when the day will come that it ceases to be an affectionate "pet" and remembers it's really a wild animal. And we really can't believe that people who love animals are truly satisfied when they have to resort to such surgery just to safely live with a beast.

Often, people decide to try to raise an orphaned wild animal in the hopes of being able to "return it to the wilds" when it is older and stronger. But by the time they have hand-tended it for a while, it has lost its natural fear of man, thus making it unfit for survival on its own. Also, wild animals profit from their mother's (and peer group's) teachings in matters of survival. Joy Adamson's Born Free tells of her woes in getting lions to learn to hunt for themselves after having been provided for by humans.

Years ago the Monterey County SPCA was forced to acquire land for a wildlife refuge, partially because they had "saved" so many baby raccoons, fawns and other creatures that could not be turned loose lest they be killed by cars, dogs or hunters.

TO A GREAT extent, keeping wild pets outdoors and free is a less harmful undertaking than attempting to bring the wild ones indoors. Bird feeders, for instance, will bring all kinds of fascinating feathered friends to your doorstep.

If you live in an area where raccoons abound, you can offer them food on your patio and enjoy the view while permitting the raccoons to go about their normal life patterns (other than an unnatural change in diet, that is). You should remember however, that raccoons can be dangerous when frightened or hurt and should be watched from the safety of your own house.

Many of the older folk in the area enjoy feeding and "befriending" the squirrels of Carmel. Although technically they may be interfering with the squirrels' natural food-gathering habits, the harm is much less than if they attempted to take these creatures inside and cage them.

It's sad that wild animals can still be obtained from dealers.
Raccoons, wolf cubs, ocelots and other animals are obtainable for a price. Ill-advised buyers don't realize it's the thrill of owning an exotic animal that attracts them and very few are up to the rigorous demands of raising a wild animal.

In addition to the problems of diet, veterinary care and housing, there's the problem of how to approach a wild animal. You may know how to deal with a thoroughly domesticated dog, but how do you punish or train an animal that has no heredity for obedience to man's wishes and no real desire to please you? What do you do when your raccoon bites you or your ocelot slashes your arm in a natural expression of displeasure?

That's why zoos are regularly offered all manner of home-raised wild pets that have proven too unmanageable for their owners. That's why humane societies have to cope with surplus fawns, snakes and the like. Don't add to the plight of wildlife around the world by mistakenly thinking you can successfully turn a wild animal into a pet.

Father Farrell's wisdom

The philosophy of Coolidge

Feast of Cure d'Avs

Aug. 4, La Playa

My mother and father were born in 1870, which makes them contemporaries of Calvin Coolidge, the 30th president of the United States and the archtypical Vermont Yankee. My parents accepted and took for granted the moral aphorisms he uttered from time to time.

Dr. Joe Grey gave me a copy of an editorial from the U.S. News and World Report which praised the president on his 110th birthday just a month ago today. Allow me to quote from his homespun philosophy:

• "If all folks in the United States would do the few simple things they know they ought to do, most of our big problems would take care of themselves."

• "It has always seemed to me that common sense is the real solvent for nations' problems at all times; common sense and hard work."

• "The American ideal is right. It is everlastingly right. What our country needs is the moral power to hold to it."

Oh Lord help us to return to the simple and tried principles of New England from which as individuals and as a nation we have strayed.

Calvin Coolidge said "There is no right to strike against public safety by anybody, anywhere, anytime." Americans have struck against so many of our ideas and ideals. My parents would be shocked and appalled by today's strike against public safety and public morality. I have not been immunized nor inoculated against the shock of moral decadence! Have you?

CVPOA board studies plan

San Carlos Ranch should remain part of existing planning areas and not be given status as a separate planning entity, the Carmel Valley Property Owners board of directors voted Wednesday, Aug. 11.

Selected board members toured the proposed development several weeks ago at the invitation of ranch owners. Concerns over water storage and irrigation — and their effect on the Carmel River aquifer — were voiced by directors. Air pollution and the added traffic flow on Carmel Valley Road also bothered CVPOA board members.

The board voted to take no action on the proposal to install 20 video games in an ice cream parlor in Carmel Valley Village; authorized president Richard Dalsamer to send a letter to the California Transportation Commission urging local hearings on the proposed Hatton Canyon freeway at the earliest possible date; and looked with favor on news that Tularcitos School will probably be chosen as the favored site for installing air pollution monitoring equipment to be housed and furnished by the Monterey Bay Air Pollution Control District. The Carmel Unified School District must first approve the idea.

To beautify the one-and-a-half mile median strip from the foot of Carmel Valley Road eastward to Del Mesa Carmel, the board voted to donate $1,000 as matching money toward a total of $3,000 required to buy native plants for the strip. Karen Strasser-Kauffman, chairwoman of the beautification committee, presented a landscaping plan drawn as a contribution to the project by Alice Mehdy, Carmel landscape architect. The plan was approved by the board when it learned the county also favored it. A board member, who preferred to remain anonymous, wrote a check for the first $500 in matching funds.

A general meeting of CVPOA membership will be scheduled Oct. 19, 20 or 21, the board decided, to present a debate on the merits of the Vote on Tomorrow's Environment, an initiative on the November ballot that requires approval of land use plans by voters in nine planning areas of Monterey County before they are adopted by the supervisors. The program would also present, in debate, candidates running for the office of 29th District Assembly under new redistricting plans.

School registration

Registration for new students entering Carmel Middle School is scheduled Monday, Aug. 23, to Friday, Sept. 3. Registration will be in the administration building from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Sixth, seventh and eighth graders who registered in the spring will pickup their class schedules on Tuesday, Aug. 31.

Classic cars gather for 32nd Concours at Pebble Beach

The 32nd annual Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance will bring some of the world's most beautiful antique and classic cars to the bayside lawn in front of The Lodge at Pebble Beach on Sunday, Aug. 22.

Among the confirmed 105 entries (out of a total of 125 cars to be accepted) are a 1906 Locomobile H Seven Passenger Touring car, a 1931 Duesenberg J Figoni Boattail Speedster, a 1927 Bugatti Type 40 Convertible and a 1939 Porsche 60 K 10 Reutter Coupe.

The Concours will include a feature class on pre-war and post-war Delahaye and Delage, and at least seven vintage Rolls-Royces.

All cars will be in place on the lawn by 10 a.m. for judging. Awards will be presented at 2 p.m. Those selected for excellence will "take the ramp" and final judging for the Best of Show award will be at 4 p.m.

Judging for the Concours will be conducted in "English" as opposed to "American." For example, a "drophead" in English is a convertible, a saloon is a sedan, a wing is a fender, a windscreen is a windshield and a boot is a trunk. A silencer is a muffler, the dynamo is the generator, the bonnet is the hood and, of course, petrol is gasoline. A lorry is a truck and a squab is a car seat.

Strother Mac Minn of Pasadena, a designer for Toyota, will be the Chief Honorary Judge. Photographer Ansel Adams of Carmel will also be an honorary judge, as will Dean Batchelor of Woodland Hills.

The Rev. Paul Woudenberg of the Church of the Wayfarer in Carmel will be the announcer for the event. Woudenberg, who lives in Pebble Beach, is an avid classic car buff. Chris Bock of Bock Realty in Carmel has been in charge of organizing the field staff and Bill Hinds of Pebble Beach is the Chief Class judge for the Delahaye and Delage classes.

Tickets for the Concours are $10. They will be available at all gates leading into Pebble Beach. Tickets include the $4 gate fee. The United Way and Pebble Beach Foundation benefit from ticket, program and poster proceeds.

For further information, phone 649-8500.

Hidden Valley Youth orchestra to play Sunday

The combined Hidden Valley Youth Orchestra and Choir will perform in concert Sunday, Aug. 22 at 8 p.m. at Carmel Mission. Henry Holt of the Seattle Opera will conduct the orchestra; the choir will be directed by Los Angeles area choral conductor John Waddell.

At the inaugural Pacific Northwest Festival, Holt became the second American conductor in history to lead a complete production of Wagner's The Ring of the Nibelung, a feat he has repeated the past seven summers.

Selected through competitive audition, the Youth Orchestra represents some of the most talented instrumentalists and vocalists in the country. They are in residence at the 19th annual Hidden Valley Summer Music Seminars program. The program is designed to provide an intensive performance and educational training experience for young high school musicians.

A college accredited program, Hidden Valley brings together several leading music educators for the three week seminar, including Pulitzer Prize-winning music critic Martin Bernheimer of the Los Angeles Times.

Past performances by Hidden Valley Youth Orchestras have earned wide critical acclaim.

An additional concert has been scheduled for Sunday, Aug. 29 at 2:30 p.m. in the Hidden Valley Theater in Carmel Valley. There is no admission charge for either concert.

For further information, phone 659-3115.

Film review:

*Burt Reynolds is pretty,
but he can't act*

By ANNE TELFORD

The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas. With Dolly Parton and Burt Reynolds. Written by Larry L. King, Peter Masterson and Colin Higgins. Directed by Colin Higgins. A Universal-RKO release.

Burt Reynolds does it again in Best Little Whorehouse, playing the good-old-boy to the hilt, wearing his cowboy hat with the proper tilt to the brim and cussin' up a storm as Sheriff Ed Earl Dodd. Only thing is — he can't act.

Dolly Parton, on the other hand, is perfect as Miss Mona. Her astronomical proportions and infectious giggle are well suited to the madam of a popular bordello. Her accent never suffers from phony inflections and her singing is always a treat.

Dom DeLuise, as the crusading Melvin P. Thorp, the "electronic bounty hunter," does have some funny moments, but not nearly enough. He spouts Texas homilies (with a bad Texas accent), wears a corset and shoulder pads and stuffs socks in his pants.

Thorp takes his traveling road show to Gilbert, Texas, home of the infamous "Chicken Ranch," to further his media career by closing down the venerable establishment. He manages to do so by arriving with his film crew in the middle of the traditional Texas-A&M football game celebration which culminates with a night at the Chicken Ranch for the winning team.

The real Chicken Ranch was actually in La Grange, Texas, not far from Austin and Houston and was closed down under similar circumstances. The film, based on the Broadway version (based on the real life version), is a bit slick and ultimately vapid.

The action, songs and plot lend themselves to a theatre production more realistically than a film; musicals always suffer from the basic improbability of someone suddenly bursting into song at odd moments. I can imagine Miss Mona and Ed Earl "fooling around" but not singing about it while attempting to do it.

Parton supervised the music and wrote several of the songs, which was a nice touch. The Texas A&M dance numbers and the soundtrack were among the better elements of Best Little Whorehouse.

In some moments the relationship between Sheriff Ed Earl and Miss Mona is actually believable and likeable; at one point they go up to the "lake" to drink beer and watch the Texas stars. Parton's dialogue is unaffected and touching, leaving you with the impression it could almost be extemporaneous.

But the nice moments just don't come often enough in Best Little Whorehouse to make it worthwhile, except, of course, if you like Burt Reynolds, regardless of who he's playing.

The Secret of NIMH: An animated film based on Robert C. O'Brien's book, Mrs. Frisby and the Rats of NIMH, the story of a widowed mouse's struggle to save her children from destruction. The film carries us to a wonderful, sometimes scary underworld of colorful animal characters. Rated G. At the Center Cinemas.

Soldier: Ken Wahl and Alberta Watson star in this thriller. Code name is "Soldier" for the government's most guarded secret. Rated R. At the Hill Theatre.

Star Wars: A story of a young hero, Luke Skywalker (Mark Hamill), who battles a battalion of villains and superhuman creatures to save the kidnapped rebel Princess Lela Organa (Cary Fisher) from the forces of evil. Wonderful special effects. Rated PG. At the State Theatre.

Things Are Tough All Over: Cheech and Chong playing dual roles. Tommy Chong plays a maniacal Arab with a nose only a Bedouin camel could love. Cheech plays his brother whose head is made up to look like a billiard ball with a hair transplant. Together, these two strange looking, oil-rich Arabs take off across the desert in pursuit of two other strange looking characters, Cheech and Chong, the laid-back dopers we're all use to. A film that is fun-filled hysteria. Rated R. At the Village Theatre.

The World According to Garp: Robin Williams is outstanding as Garp, who has a funny way of looking at life. The film is based on the best-selling novel by John Irving. A far-out comedy. Rated R. At the Golden Bough.

A CHAMPION Norwegian elkhound struts his stuff as he would in the showing. Elkhounds will be among 115 different breeds and varieties to be exhibited at the second annual Del Monte Kennel Club all-breed dog show, Monday, Aug. 23 at Carmel Middle School.

115 breeds to strut their stuff at Del Monte K.C. show Monday

If you have never witnessed 1,400 dogs representing more than 100 distinct breeds or varieties assembled at one location, the Del Monte Kennel Club all-breed dog show can provide a new experience. The event is scheduled from 8 a.m. Monday, Aug. 23 on the Carmel Middle School athletic fields. Best in Show judging should conclude by late afternoon.

There really will be 115 different breeds, ranging from spunky little Affenpinschers to diminutive Yorkshire terriers. In between, spectators will find the well-known breeds like collies, boxers, German shepherds, spaniels, retrievers and three sizes of poodle (toy, miniature and standard), plus many rare and unfamiliar dogs. All, however, belong to a breed recognized by the American Kennel Club (AKC) and all will be groomed to the nines in preparation for the event.

Heading the impressive list of entries is the golden retriever breed with 87 in competition. Afghan hounds will be represented by 73 specimens and will be shown on a separate field, the better to appreciate their beautiful flowing coats and superb movement.

In addition to conformation (breed) judging, there will be obedience classes beginning at 8:30 a.m., and a junior showmanship class at 1 p.m. In the showmanship class, the handlers, all less than 18 years of age, are judged on the way they present the dog rather than the dog being judged on his physical qualities. The obedience division boasts 96 entries.

Three films will be shown in conjunction with an exhibit by the American Kennel Club. They will be shown at 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. at no additional charge in one of the middle school buildings. The films are AKC and the Sport of Dogs, Gait and In the Ring With Mr. Wrong. A variety of brochures explaining the AKC and what it does to promote purebred dogs will be available.

A chicken barbecue will be available at $4 per person. Proceeds will benefit Carmel Mission Kiwanis Club youth activities. Snacks will also be prepared by the Carmel High School Athletic Club.

Admission to the dog show is a $2 parking fee which admits the entire family. A portion of the proceeds will be donated to the Carmel Middle School parents association for use in funding extra-curricular activities at the middle school.

The event is the second August all-breed show for the Del Monte Kennel Club, which also presents an exclusive championship show at The Lodge in Pebble Beach in May. The show is part of a three-day circuit which includes the Salinas and Santa Cruz Kennel Clubs.

Carmel Middle School is .7 miles east of Highway 1 on Carmel Valley Road. For further information, phone show secretary Dave Williams at 372-2884.

Backgammon

The extra chance

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

It is Black's turn to roll, and he doubles. Should you accept the double or should you resign?

If Black uses his dice without waste, he needs a total of 71 points on the dice to bring his outside men in and bear all of his men off. You will need a total of 87 points. Most experts agree that in a pure running game you can take a double when your disadvantage in the race is not greater than 15 per cent of your opponent's count. Since Black's count is 71 points you would take the double if you were not more than 11 points behind in the race.

The position is not, however, a pure running game since you have a fair chance to hit a blot as Black brings his outside men in. If he rolls any six except double six he must leave a blot on his midpoint. In fact, if he is unlucky enough to roll 6-2, he must also leave a blot on his bar point.

It's true that if he leaves a blot you may not hit it. And if you do hit the blot, he may still win the game. Still, if you hit the blot and he does not immediately come in, you have a sound redouble and he has a doubtful take.

All told, your chance to hit a blot, added to your chance to win the race by outrolling Black, is just about enough to justify accepting the double.

Would you like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way to you when you send 50 cents plus a stamped, self-addressed, No. 10 envelope to Backgammon, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.

THE BIGGEST line-up of Porsches ever presented in the United States (including racing models like those pictured above) will be at Laguna Seca Raceway Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 21-22, for the 9th annual Monterey Historic Automobile Races.

Historic auto races this weekend

A major change in format, another record entry list and a Tribute to Porsche will be among the highlights of the 9th Annual Monterey Historic Automobile Races, Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 21-22 at Laguna Seca Raceway.

The format change will include racing on Saturday and Sunday this year. Previously, racing had been limited to Saturday only, although last season a Friday-Saturday format was introduced.

Growth of the event, which this year boasts a record 305 entries, has caused the change to Saturday-Sunday racing. Sears Roebuck & Co. will sponsor the event, as it has for the past three years, and will present a special award to the best restored automobile and race awards to competitors.

The Tribute to Porsche is drawing considerable attention from the German auto maker; Dr. Ferry Porsche, head of the famous company, and son of the late Dr. Ferdinand Porsche, designer of the race car, is slated for a personal appearance.

Among the special vehicles being brought to Monterey will be the first West Coast appearance of an Auto Union, which along with Mercedes Benz, represented the unlimited hydroplanes of racing cars in the 1930s. There are only two in the world now and the last appearance of the car in this country was in the 1939 Vanderbilt Cup races.

Also scheduled to appear is the No. 1 Gmund, the first roadster built. All in all, when presented from No. 1 to the present, this will be the biggest line-up of Porsches ever displayed!

Action each day will begin at 8:30 a.m. on the twisting 1.9-mile, nine-turn Laguna Seca track.

Special activities Saturday will include a Porsche Production Car Parade at 11:30 a.m. and two Porsche Race Car Parades starting at noon. The Auto Union 16 cylinder Grand Prix car will be demonstrated at 12:35 p.m. and that will be followed by demonstration laps of both the Porsche 936 and 956.

Sunday's special events will include a second Auto Union demonstration at 11:10 a.m., an Audi Parade at noon, the Sports Car Racing Association of the Monterey Peninsula's (SCRAMP) 25th Anniversary Parade at 12:15 p.m. and demonstrations of the Porsche 936 and 956 at 1 p.m.

Tickets for the Historic include admission to paddock and grandstand and are $12 each day. There is a two-day advance sale ticket available for $20. For reservations or further information, phone 373-1811.

'Wilderness Medicine' workshop Saturday at Community Hospital

Whether you've just broken your ankle in the back country or had your home swept away by a mountain of mud, survival may well depend on knowing what to do next.

A free workshop on Wilderness Medicine will cover these and other survival problems Saturday, Aug. 21 from 9 a.m.-noon in the Main Conference room at Community Hospital, W.R. Holman Highway.

Robert Keller, M.D., a member of the Community Hospital emergency department staff, will teach the workshop. Dr. Keller, a specialist in emergency medicine, has been a survival medicine consultant to the U.S. Army and served as a special envoy to the Spanish government's Task Force on Emergency Medical Services.

Keller will present a wide range of information, including what to keep in a home or wilderness survival kit, how to treat contacts with insects, snakes, dangerous animals and noxious plants and how to evaluate your situation, whether in a wilderness or civil disaster.

Participants will also learn about first aid techniques, setting up camps and dealing with weather problems.

Workshop seating is on a first-come, first-served basis. For further information, phone 625-4505.

Arts are for everyone and they need promotion

By RICHARD TYLER

EVEN WITH an educated public and performances readily available, the arts need promotion. In a country where public relations, publicity, advertising, and other promotion skills have been elevated to near-sciences, the performing arts have made little effective use of these devices.

Lack of funds has been one reason for this. Frequently, however, performing arts organizations seem to feel their mere existence would attract an audience. In a competitive society this is not enough. Audience development can be substantially helped by the services of good and experienced public relations counsel.

It is sometimes asked why the press carries radio and television program listings daily at no charge to the media while producers of concerts, dance recitals and plays must regularly buy space at considerable cost in order even to be mentioned. (To some degree this is changing.) The answer seems to be that the former are regarded as a public service because there is a large public to be served; the latter, having negligible readership interest, are penalized by many newspapers. This inequity is remedied on the Peninsula at relatively small cost to newspapers and to the considerable benefit of the arts by the listings of events in certain sections of the paper on particular days.

The creation of a favorable environment for the arts depends primarily upon education. Any significant increase in demand for the performing arts will derive only from a citizenry that has come to love them and to depend on them. Furthermore, the pursuit of excellence in the arts grows only from a general public recognition of what constitutes high quality. Mediocrity is the mania inherent in egalitarianism. The only weapon that can be used to combat it is education — not a mediocre education but one that produces an appreciation of form and a basic concern for the things of the mind and spirit.

Obviously, this cannot be accomplished quickly. But if it is to be accomplished at all, there are steps to be taken now and in the years immediately ahead. The habit of attendance is based on a strong sense of need and without a sense of urgent necessity on the part of the people, the performing arts will always remain peripheral, exotic, and without significance. Therefore, the habit must be acquired young; it is probably not too soon to begin at six years of age. After all at that age boys are learning to play baseball. Music and dance and play acting come naturally to children at that age. This can easily be translated into the pleasure of seeing and hearing others perform.

The role of the family at this stage cannot be over-emphasized. If it is not interested in the arts, is not willing to offer youngsters at least an occasional opportunity to satisfy their curiosity about what goes on inside the theater or recital hall or opera house, then no formal effort at cultural education is likely to be very successful. The family climate that reinforces the school's efforts to introduce the child to the pleasures of the performing arts is of inestimable underlying importance in enlarging the audiences of the future.

For the school to make sure that a child attends a concert, a play, or a dance recital once a year for 10 years will neither allow the child to acquire a habit nor create a sense of necessity about art. These pleasures will remain something to take or leave, and the chances are on the side of the latter. But to provide live performances for young people with sufficient frequency, quality, and range to establish a life-long habit is generally impossible within the context of American education at this present time.

Arts organizations and independent agencies are helping build greater appreciation among children of school age and might be aided in expanding their work. They have done this with various methods and degrees of success. Observing what has been done in Europe, some have established children's matinees, other youth events, and special student ticket prices. As yet nothing has been created in this country to compare with the Children's Theater and Theaters for Young Spectators in the Soviet Union. In the United States the pioneers in providing programs for youth have been the music organizations. The effective exposure of young people to the arts is as much a civic responsibility as programs in health and welfare.

The role of the critic to maintain standards, weed out the second and third rate, and cast a spotlight of approval upon the best is important in building greater appreciation. Save in a handful of major cities, newspaper criticism of musical, theatrical, and dance events is the responsibility of journalists with no specialized knowledge of the field. We are fortunate in our area to have available the kind of music critics who have the necessary credentials to make qualified critical comment.

The arts are one of the central elements of a good society, an essential of a full life for the many — not a luxury for the few. This conviction is shared by growing numbers of Americans with the result that the arts are being given a far larger mission than they have been commonly accorded in the past.

Few can take issue with making the arts available to everyone who wishes to enjoy them. We must never allow the central focus on quality to weaken or shift. Popularization in any realm often leads to a reduction of standards. In our effort to broaden the audience base we must not be led to accept imitation as a substitute for creation, mediocrity as a stand-in for excellence. Democratization carries with it a peril for the arts.

There are no guarantees against the dilution of standards that often accompanies an expanding public but a constant critical awareness of the danger can do much to prevent its consequences. The promotion of good performances is the basis for strong development of a public which seeks out the play, the music, and the dance of the theater.

Healing workshop Saturday

A unique healing workshop by the Rev. Dorie D'Angelo, the "Angel Lady of Carmel," will be given Saturday, Aug. 21 at the Boy Scout House, Mission and Eighth, Carmel from noon-4:30 p.m.

"We will be doing healings on each other, personal healings. At the same time we will be doing a planetary healing," said Rev. Gary Springfield, organizer of the seminar.

D'Angelo is often called the "Angel Lady of Carmel" because she says her spiritual healing is done with the help of angels. She is also assisted by physicians who have passed on from the earth plane to a higher vibration in the spirit world, she says.

For the past 12 years D'Angelo has held weekly meetings in Carmel, first at the Cherry Foundation and now at the Boy Scout House. Although she is 80 years old, she still puts in a full day's work with her private healing sessions, lectures, seminars, healing meetings and classes.

"The more people there are in a healing group, the more the power is increased," said Rev. Springfield. "If you have 10 people, the healing has a power of 100, increased by the square. If we have 100 people, there is a power of 10,000. We hope to have at least 100 people at this workshop."

Mark Wallace of Santa Cruz will provide music. There will be refreshments. Cost of the workshop is $30. Pre-registration is recommended. For further information, phone 625-3390.

French artist Georges Damin to appear at opening of his show at Zantman's French artist George Damin will be guest of honor at a reception to open the one-man show of his paintings Saturday, Aug. 21 from 5-8 p.m. at Zantman Art Galleries, Sixth and Mission, Carmel. The public is invited to meet the artist, who will make a special trip from France to attend the opening, and view the exhibit. Cocktails and hors d'oeuvres will be served.

How Damin became associated with Zantman Art Galleries is a tale gallery owner Hans Zantman loves to repeat.

The Zantmans make an annual trip to Paris, but rarely venture into Montmartre, where open-air art exhibits are common. On one occasion about 15 years ago, however, they ventured into this bohemian quarter and saw a young artist at work whose paintings were fresh and different. The Zantmans bought two canvases for themselves.

Several years later, in 1969, a French couple visited the Zantman Galleries. The man proved to be Georges Damin, whose paintings the Zantmans had purchased in Montmartre!

A native of Tunisia, Damin was born in 1942 and moved to France with his parents when he was ten. He studied silk design at the Ecole de Tissage and painting with the artist, Pelloux. His work was shown in several salons in Paris and Lyon.

Damin, whose show this year in Megeve, France, sold out, usually spends summers in St. Tropez in the South of France, where he loves to paint.

Included in the 1982 Damin exhibition at Zantman Galleries are paintings of Paris, towns in Provence and scenes of Venice.

CANAL DE BRUGES by French painter Georges Damin is among an extensive collection of his latest work to be displayed at Zantman Art Galleries, Sixth and Mission, Carmel. The artist will be present at an opening reception Saturday, Aug. 21 from 5-8 p.m. The public is welcome.

Classic car paintings in Carmel

Just in time for the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance, Shell Fisher's Gallery will present a showing of classic car paintings by Nancy Graham, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 20-22. There will be a reception for the artist each day from 6-9 p.m. at the Gallery. Graham's paintings will be for sale.

Graham's quest for expanding her knowledge of the arts took her throughout Europe where she studied the great masters, their use of color and technique.

Through her travels Graham kept returning to her roots, expressing the things she loves. Her training in design captured her imagination in the art of car design. The more she delved into cars as an artistic expression, the more she began analyzing lines and styles, discovering the history of man and the changing times through the different styles of automobiles.

Her training in art and photography has led her to develop an unusual technique of capturing a photo-realism effect in watercolors and acrylics. Her intriguing execution of reflections is a keynote of her style.

Graham's formal education includes bachelors and masters degrees in art from Eastern Illinois University. She received a four year talented student award scholarship and an Allerton Federated Art School scholarship. She has had several one man shows and is in private collections throughout the United States.

Shell Fisher's Gallery is at San Carlos and Fifth, Carmel. For further information, phone 625-3007.

The first workshop is Friday, Aug. 19 at Seaside Multi-Use Center, 986 Hilby Ave., Seaside, from 2:30-5 p.m. Free.

We've added more mature landscaping to accent the rustic setting and there's now a fully-decorated model of our Plan B floorplan as well as a vignette of Plan A.

Exteriors crafted with cedar siding and shake roofs blend beautifully with landscaped front yards and individually fenced rear yards to give Village Green a special natural charm.

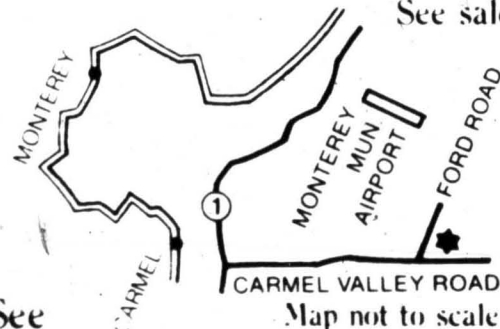

Best of all, we've added value to Village Green by drastically reducing prices to those who buy a new Village Green home today.

Small Gold Mine at 6th and Park

The claim is 100 x 100 feet square, located on a Monterey corner just one block east of Lake El Estero. It's level, beautifully landscaped, and currently produces income of $29,400 per year.

There are 3 buildings and 4 living units, all presently leased. The entire property was remodeled this year, so successfully that it won a Special Certificate of Merit for Outstanding Private Housing Rehabilitation, awarded by the City of Monterey.

The key building is a one-story house, right on the corner, with 2 bedrooms, living room, bath, kitchen and an elevated front porch. Just down 6th Street toward the lake is a slightly larger home with 3 bedrooms.

The third structure is on Park Avenue, a duplex done in New Orleans style with identical reversed apartments, each including living room, kitchen, bedroom and bath.

All 3 buildings are finished in narrow shiplap siding, painted in authentic Victorian colors. A series of neatly fenced back yards provides play space, gardening and recreation areas for each tenant. The beauty of this little complex is that everything is done. Flowers, fences, lighting, painting, appliances—all there, all done.

The location is a preferred rental area, close to the Naval Post Graduate School, near downtown Monterey, just a few blocks from Highway 1 leading easily to all points on the Monterey Peninsula. An ideal, trouble-free, perfectly located investment opportunity. $379,000.
